INFIGHTING SLOWS DOWN TALIBAN GOVT FORMATION

ISI chief rushes to Kabul to lobby for the Haqqanis; Taliban reasonable in addressing India's concerns, says Foreign Secretary Shringla

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE

THE Taliban have yet again postponed the formal announcement of their government reportedly due to infighting among various factions within the militia over power-sharing, especially between the Baradar camp and the Haqqani Network. While Mullah Abdul Ghani Baradar, chairman of the Taliban's political office in Qatar, is widely believed to be the face of the new government with Hibatullah Akhundzada being the titular head, the ISI-sponsored Haqqani Network, whose troops control Kabul, is eyeing an important role in the yet-to-be formed government. "The announcement about the new government and Cabinet members will be made next week," Taliban spokesman Zabihullah Mujahid said on Saturday, without divulging more details. This is the second time that the Taliban have delayed the formation of the government in Kabul since they seized Kabul on August 15.

In a surprise move, ISI chief Lieutenant General Faiz Hameed reached Kabul on Saturday reportedly to lobby for the Haqqanis. The ISI chief's trip is the first high-level visit by a Pak official since the Taliban took over Kabul. Earlier in the day, Pak Army chief General Qamar Jawad Bajwa met British Foreign Secretary Dominic Raab and told him that

PM Modi plans to visit US later this month

New Delhi: Amid the rapidly evolving situation in Afghanistan, Prime Minister Narendra Modi plans to visit the US during September 22-27, sources said. This will be Modi's first US trip after President Joe Biden assumed office. The two have previously met virtually at the Quad summit in March, G7 summit in June and climate change summit in April.

Pakistan would assist in the formation of an inclusive administration in Afghanistan.

According to Khalil Haqqani, one of the Taliban leaders negotiating with different groups over power-sharing, the bid to make the new government broad-based and acceptable to the international community is causing the delay.

"The Taliban can form a government of their own but they are now focusing to have an administration in which all parties, groups and sections of the society have proper representation," he said.

Meanwhile, India's Foreign Secretary Harsh Vardhan Shringla expressed hope that the Taliban would be 'reasonable' while addressing India's concerns. "Our engagement with the Taliban has been limited. It's not that we have had a robust conversation. But for whatever conversation we've had so far... the Taliban seem to indicate that they will be reasonable in the way they handle this," the foreign secretary said. On Tuesday, the Indian envoy to Qatar, Deepak Mittal, had held talks with a senior Taliban leader in Doha. P12

Karnataka to ban online gambling

ASHWINI M SRIPAD @ Bengaluru

ONLINE gambling and betting will soon be banned in Karnataka. The Cabinet on Saturday took a decision to amend the Karnataka Police Act to bring the ban into effect. However, online lottery and betting on horse races, happening within or outside the State, can continue legally, said Law and Parliamentary Affairs Minister JC Madhuswamy after the cabinet meeting.

The cabinet approved a draft of the amendment bill, which will be placed before the Houses during the legislature session commencing from September 13, he added.

The decision follows a direction from the Karnataka High Court asking the State Government to take a stand on online gambling.

The draft bill states, "Gambling means all forms of wagering or betting in the form of tokens, valued in terms of money, virtual currency and electronic transfer of funds in connection with any game of chance. It is also any act of risking money on the unknown result of an event, including on a game of skill, playing any game or by any third parties."

Madhuswamy said the instrument of gaming includes any article used or intended to be used, including computers, computer systems, mobile apps, internet or cyber space, virtual platforms, software and accessories. Home Minister Araga Jnanendra told TNSE that earlier, the police could raid places where playing cards and other gambling activities took place. P4

MANGROVE HAVEN BECKONS TOURISTS

Forests in the backwaters of Kundapur serve two purposes: protect the shore and boost eco-tourism in the area

PRAKASH SAMAGA @Udupi

A boat ride through serene mangrove forests is the new attraction for tourists visiting Kundapur in Udupi district -- along with wildlife watching, recreational angling and trekking. The backwaters of the Panchagangavali River in Kodi, Kundapur, with a profusion of mangrove forests, have become an eco-tourism hotspot.

The forest department took up the initiative to plant mangroves, and the last decade saw plantation areas in the backwaters increase by 450 hectares. The mangroves serve the twin objectives of protecting the shore and boosting eco-tourism. Seedlings planted on about 15 hectares last year in Kodi are now thriving, and provide a green canopy for boat journeys in the backwaters.

In July this year, former forests minister Aravind Limbavali had expressed pleasure about traversing through mangrove forests on a boat, and stressed the prospects of boosting eco-tourism in the region. He had taken a half-hour long boat ride down the Panchagangavali river.

Boating was started here a few years ago. Nagaraj Kanchan brought in 'Royal Fortune' and introduced boating in the Panchagangavali river in 2019, and slowly, enquiries from tourists started coming in. Anand Kharvi and his cousins, Santhosh Kharvi and Sathish Kharvi, invested Rs 10 lakh and introduced 'Chakramma Tourist' boat the next year. Anand Kharvi told The New Sunday Express that tourists wanting to take a boat ride through the mangrove forests have increased. "A few pre-wedding shoots have also taken place here, as we offer packages for three or four hours, as per their need," he added.

A team of six enthusiasts from Mysuru, led by IT professional Manjunath, arrived in Udupi recently and their first destination was a boat ride through the mangrove forests in Kundapur. "The calm backwaters left us mesmerized. We saw the canopy of mangroves rising up to 20-25 feet in some stretches. We went early in the morning, so we got to hear the rhythmic chirping of birds. A boat ride is an opportunity to learn about the rich and diverse eco-system," he said.

Mangrove forests are predominantly seen in Kodi, Jalady, Anagalli, Uppinakudru, Paduvari, Koderi, Sasthana and Udyavara regions of Udupi district, and are spread over 600 hectares. The areas where mangrove plants grow are breeding grounds for fish, so from the point of view of conservation of ecology, these bio-shield mangrove forests have to be safeguarded. Birds like the white-bellied sea eagle, brown-headed gull, grey heron and white-breasted kingfisher are found mainly in the mangrove forests in Jalady.

Eco-tourism can be promoted by growing mangrove forests in other backwaters in the coastal region too. Ashish Reddy M V, Deputy Conservator of Forests, Kundapur division, a passionate nature conservationist, told TNSE that the conservation and extension of mangrove forests was possible in the region due to the participation of locals as well.

The mangroves of Paduvari in Byndoor taluk look spectacular when seen from the Ottinene area, appearing like floating islands of green. These evergreen forests also sequester a lot more carbon from the atmosphere than tropical forests, are salt-tolerant and check the salty wind blowing from the ocean, thereby saving crops and soil along the coast.

The mangrove species in the region are Rhizophora mucronata, Avicenniaceae, Bruguiera, Sonneratiaceae Sonneratia, among others. Systematic afforestation by the forest department has led to an increase in mangroves over the past decade, providing 'nursing homes' for a variety of fish and bird species, Reddy added. Mangrove seedlings are planted when the water level goes down and sand dunes become visible during April and May.

BEYOND CALL OF DUTY

This Teachers' Day, we bring you four educators who stepped in to help many

Art teacher helps student bag national award

KARTHIK K K @Mysuru

WITH every power cut, 15-year-old Chandana's heart would plunge. Living in a remote village in Mysuru district, with no access to machinery and tools, she had lost hope of competing in the National Kala Utsav.

Timely assistance by her art teacher K Sangeetha, who took Chandana to her house for three days and helped her hone her skill of Gourd Art, ensured that she won second place at the national-level Kala Utsav, under the category 'Indigenous Toys and Games'. The Utsav is an initiative of the Ministry of Human Resource Development under the Rashtriya Madhyamik Shiksha Abhiyan, held in the early part of this year.

Sangeetha, a drawing teacher at the Government High School in GB Saragur in Mysuru district, proved the adage that a good teacher can inspire and ignite the imagination of a student.

Daughter of a tailor, Chandana, a Class 9 student who topped the state-level art competition and was selected for the Kala Utsav, had almost lost hope due to frequent power cuts in her village. Subsequent lockdowns played spoilsport as she lost out on training when schools were shut.

Sangeetha was determined to train Chandana for the national competition. She convinced Chandana's parents and took her home to Mysuru, where she gave her hands-on experience in using the machinery.

"We had very little time to prepare for the event. With schools shut, it was difficult to train the students," says Sangeetha. Despite using the machines for just three days, the talented Chandana bagged second prize, not possible without her teacher's effort.

RAGHOTTAM KOPPAR @Gadag

A 52-year-old government school teacher has been walking the extra mile ever since the beginning of the Covid-19 pandemic to ensure that students do not miss out on their classes.

Vivekanandagouda Patil, a teacher at Government High School, SM Krishna Nagar, Gadag town, has been producing short videos on myriad subjects -- from short stories to letter writing to poems to current affairs -- for Class 10 students. His YouTube channel -- Vivekanandagouda Patil -- has 2,91,000 subscribers, and provides videos in both Kannada and English.

With limited knowledge of the Internet, let alone video-producing and -editing skills, Patil started it all from scratch. With schools shut due to the lockdown, Patil utilised the free time to learn video editing and graphic softwares in 15 days and started producing the short informative clips. He has so far spent Rs 1,10,000 on a laptop, camera and other equipment. What attracts students to his channel is that the videos explain even the complex of subjects using simple graphics. Patil has also started a '10 questions quiz game' to engage students to improve their general knowledge. A student from Sudi Government School, who watches Patil's videos regularly, said, "We were deprived of regular schooling last year. Patil's sir's videos came as a saviour to us. The videos come with graphics, which makes it easy for us to understand even complex lessons, poems and other subjects." Patil said that his aim is to take his videos to more and more students. "I started my channel during the first wave of Covid, when students were sitting idle. I am happy that my videos have attracted many. I will continue to make videos," he concluded.

Helping poor kids, Covid orphans

ARPITHA I @Shivamogga

AS the pandemic made education inaccessible for many students in rural areas, Anitha Mary, a physical education teacher at Government Higher Primary School in Hunasekatte, stepped in to help children. Having seen her sister die of hunger and due to lack of treatment, she had decided to work for the welfare of underprivileged students.

"During the Vidyagama scheme, the school would provide notes that were more than 25-30 pages. Many students found it difficult to pay for a photocopy of the notes," the 57-year-old teacher said. However, after much struggle, she found Arpitha Pereira from Israel, who donated a photocopy-cum-printer machine for the students.

"It was challenging to explain the importance of education and learning to parents. However, three to five students have started coming to the school to collect notes," she said.

She came across a WhatsApp message of Nirmalananda Swamiji of Adichunchanagiri Mutt stating they can provide free education to children who lost their parents to Covid-19. She identified four children from the district and sent them to avail free education.

She identified students who were affected by the pandemic and those who lost their parents due to Covid. Mary distributed ration kits to such families for one month by spending her own money and donations from other teachers. A private jewellery enterprise also came forward and donated 100 more ration kits for these families.

Going the extra mile for his students

PRAKASH SAMAGA @Udupi

WHAT does it take to distract students from the pandemic blues and make them focus on studies? Answer: An energetic and enthusiastic teacher with a flair for social media. Surendra Samagara fits the bill to a T.

For the past 13 years, Surendra, hailing from Byndoor in Udupi district, has been teaching at Sri Siddalingeshwara High School on Magadi Road in Bengaluru South. When the pandemic forced classes to go online, this social science teacher realised that students will need much more to stay interested.

Looking to give the kids something more so that their enthusiasm is not diminished, he went the extra mile, coming up with a YouTube channel -- Surendra Guddehotel -- where he uploads videos of lessons during his "free time". The channel now has close to 2,000 subscribers and students are impressed by his friendly and engaging style of teaching. Surendra's seven-year-old son Samarth pitches in, helping with recording the lectures.

Surendra told The New Sunday Express that his aim was not just to teach the subject. "I wanted to bring a smile on the faces of those stars (as he calls his students)," he said. So far, the committed teacher has conducted no fewer than 27 classes for SSLC students on YouTube.

Students, too, have appreciated Surendra's remote learning solution. Sathish, a Class 10 student at a school in Bengaluru, who watches Surendra's YouTube classes, says that he could learn as well as get mentored. "I am grateful to have Surendra as my mentor," he adds.

PALIKE DIRECTS ZONAL COMMISSIONERS TO FILL POTHOLES

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @Bengaluru

AFTER being bombarded with complaints from citizens, the Bruhat Bengaluru Mahanagara Palike (BBMP) has put the onus on the zonal commissioners and the chief engineers to fill potholes in the city.

BBMP Chief Commissioner Gaurav Gupta issued a set of directives on Saturday and said that officials or engineers cannot say that the road does not fall under their jurisdiction. "When a complaint is lodged, the road has to be fixed. The work of filling up potholes should be done on war-footing and the task forces set up for road infrastructure must ensure that the work is completed immediately," he said.

The directives issued stated that BBMP has given out contracts and sourcing materials is not a challenge. Thus arterial, sub-arterial and high-density corridors should be immediately addressed.

The BBMP chief further pointed out that the road infrastructure department has been taking up development work through arterial and sub-arterial roads, but due to the lack of coordination among various departments, potholes are not getting fixed.

Gupta directed the officials to create a task force to fill all the potholes and make a list of all the roads that need to be fixed and the time it will take. He said that ward engineers must collect information on all the roads. The data of asphalt mix supplied daily from the hot mix plant to different zones must be submitted to chief engineers of each zone.

A pond, a lake! No, it's just a road

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @Bengaluru

WHAT do you do when a stretch of 6.8 km road is filled with potholes and resembles a flood-hit area every time it rains? Instead of just standing with placards to register their protest, the locals decided to sow paddy and take coracle rides along the non-motorable stretch.

to the Nagawara-Gottigere or Vasanathapura-Anjanapura Road. They said the road, managed by the Bangalore Development Authority, is in such bad shape that ambulances cannot pass through it.

After the protest, Bengaluru South MLA M Krishnappa visited the site and assured the citizens that the road will be fixed in three months. Meghana Murthy, a resident of Anjanapura, said the road is in a sorry state for the last 12 years and repeated pleas have not been heard.

Abdul Aleem, a member of Change Makers of Kanakapura Road, said the road has not been asphalted despite writing several letters to BDA. "Every time we asked the MLA, he said tenders will be called. If nothing is done now, we will form a human chain," he said.

Krishnappa said, "The work of repairing the road will start in a month as tenders need to be called. The approach roads are however in good condition."

BDA Commissioner Rajesh Gowda said Rs 23 crore has been set aside for road works. "There was a fund crunch and other works were being done along the stretch. That's why the repair works were delayed," he added.

Jakkur flying school to be developed under PPP

Bengaluru: The state government has decided to develop the Government Flying Training School (GFTS) in Jakkur, Bengaluru, under public private partnership (PPP) model. This was decided in the Cabinet on Saturday. Speaking to reporters after the meeting, Minister for Law and Parliamentary Affairs JC Madhuswamy said that earlier, GFTS was given to Rajiv Gandhi Society, but they did not start the training activities. "So, we decided to make it under PPP model. Tender will be called for the same," he added. Apart from this, the Cabinet also decided to amend Panchayat Raj Delimitation Act, where they have proposed constitution of separate delimitation commission. ENS

CM for 100% vaccination in border villages

Be vigilant, take steps to contain Covid-19 spread, Bommai tells officials of DK, Kodagu, Ch'nagar, Udipi, Hassan

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@ Bengaluru

CHIEF Minister Basavaraj Bommai on Saturday directed officials of Dakshina Kannada, Kodagu, Chamarajanagar, Udipi and Hassan districts to be more vigilant and take measures to contain the spread of Covid-19.

In a video-conference with officials and ministers in charge of the five districts, the CM took stock of the situation, including Covid-19 positivity and mortality rate, number of people admitted in hospitals and the pace of the ongoing vaccination drive.

Bommai directed the officials to keep a close watch on the situation and increase testing and vaccination, especially in border areas and towns in Dakshina Kannada district. On Saturday, Dakshina Kannada district reported 162 fresh Covid-19 cases and Udipi 97 new cases.

After the number of Covid-19 cases in districts bordering Kerala and Maharashtra increased, the State Government imposed restrictions in those districts and also put in place additional containment measures in the state. Karnataka has made seven days of institutional quarantine mandatory for students and employees from Kerala and RT-PCR-negative report mandatory for all those coming from that state.

Bommai, who had earlier visited border districts to review the prevailing Covid-19 situation, said vaccination drive needs to be further intensified and it has to reach 100 per cent in all villages within 20 km distance from the state border.

Meeting on Ganesha Chaturthi today

The State Government is likely to decide on allowing public celebrations on Ganesha Chaturthi by following Covid-19 protocols. Revenue Minister R Ashoka said they have requested Chief Minister Basavaraj Bommai to relax restrictions for conducting Ganesha Chaturthi and he is hopeful that it will be done. The CM will take a final decision on Sunday, Ashoka said.

Bommai had earlier stated that he will hold a meeting with experts and ministers to decide on the demand to ease restrictions for allowing public celebration of the festival by following all Covid-19 guidelines.

Another cluster: 24 nursing students, staff +ve

IFFATH FATHIMA @ Bengaluru

A day after a nursing college in Horamavu reported 34 cases of Covid-19 infection, another cluster was detected in a nursing college in Dasarahalli on Saturday, with about 24 positive cases. There are over 450 students on the college campus, including 200 boys and 250 girls.

On August 30, one student of Dhanvantri Nursing College was found to be Covid-positive. After the case was detected, over 470 RT-PCR tests were done on the staff and students and seven boys, 14 girls and three teachers were found to be positive. Following this, the Bruhat Bengaluru Mahanagara Palike (BBMP) has declared 18 rooms in the boys' hostel and 11 rooms in the girls' hostel as containment zones.

A BBMP zonal health official pointed out that they are not sure if there is an interstate connection to the outbreak. "We are not sure if there was any inter-state travel. The matter is still being looked into. The students have gone to nearby markets and local stores where they may have contracted the virus."

About 90 per cent of the students and staff are vaccinated with the first dose and 10 per cent of the staff have completed both doses.

Palike Special Commissioner (Health) D Randeep pointed out that BBMP has been containing the clusters well. "Since we have been conducting a high number of tests, we are able to track down positive cases quickly. It is still not a cause for concern. The advantage with hostels is that an immediate perimeter check can be done and the outbreak controlled, unlike in residential areas."

About 20 of the positive students had been moved to Covid Care Centres and one has been put on an ICU ventilator bed at ESI Hospital, Rajajinagar. The three positive teachers have been allowed to quarantine themselves at home.

"If there are multiple clusters in a location, then institutional quarantine is mandatory for all positive cases. We do not allow people to quarantine themselves at home. Only those who test negative will be allowed to return to the area," Randeep added.

Vijayapura sees 1st child Covid death

VIJAYAPURA: With the death of two-year-old child a week ago, Vijayapura district has reported its first child death from the novel Coronavirus since the outbreak of the Covid-19 pandemic a year ago. The girl from Shahpete in the city was admitted to a private hospital after she developed mild-fever. The girl tested positive for Covid-19 after a test on August 14. However, the girl failed to respond to the treatment and succumbed on August 24. A health official said, "Though many children have tested positive for Covid, the two-year-old is the first child to succumb to the virus in the district," a health official said. ENS

CHIEF Minister Basavaraj Bommai recently announced Karnataka would be the first state in the country to double farmers' income. Projections are easier, the road to achieving it is fraught with major challenges.

The Narendra Modi-led BJP government, which came to power at the Centre in 2014, set an ambitious goal of doubling farmers' incomes by 2023-24, taking 2015-16 as the base year.

As per the estimates of the Doubling Farmers' Income (DFI) Committee, the average annual income of agricultural households in Karnataka was Rs 96,718 in 2011-12, which went up to Rs 1,54,399 in 2015-16. The target now is Rs 2,84,888 by 2023-24, with a focus on improving crop and livestock productivity, efficiency in resource utilisation, savings on production costs, increasing cropping intensity, diversifying towards high-value crops and enhancing real prices received by farmers.

According to a senior officer in the Agriculture Department, the main challenge is to sharpen the focus on post-harvest practices. The focus will be on "Secondary Agriculture", which means everything after harvest - aggregation, processing, branding, marketing and even exports, he says.

This means that the department, which mainly focuses on production, has to take on the responsibility of assisting farmers till the agricultural produce is marketed and farmers get a good price for it. "We have almost become self-sufficient in production, and millions of tons of foodgrains are stored in Food Corporation of India (FCI) godowns. Now, to increase incomes of farmers, the focus has to shift to secondary agriculture," the official pointed out.

"As regards fruits and vegetables, nearly 25-30 per cent is wasted, and in foodgrains, the post-harvest loss is around 8-10 per cent. This amounts to nearly Rs 95,000 crore worth fruits, vegetables and grains wasted across India. There is a need to stop this," the official says. With milk, the "post-harvest" loss is less than 1 per cent, as there is a cold chain from production to consumer. But, in fruits and vegetables, which are perishable, the losses are high due to lack of proper system and infrastructure.

In many ways, the lack of ro-

Doubling farmers' income a grand plan, but riddled with challenges bust post-harvest infrastructure is affecting production. Gopal, president of the wholesale merchants' association in Hassan, says farmers would come forward to cultivate land scientifically if the government provides proper market facilities and minimum support price (MSP) for the produce, without which they are losing interest in agriculture.

The government purchases a few crops at minimum support price, while there is a big gap between production, supply and demand. Dejected farmers destroy standing crops on many occasions due to fall in prices, and are reluctant to go ahead with the next round of cropping, fearing further losses.

SKewed PLANNING NEEDS CORRECTION

Land allotted for food parks have no road connectivity. "It's almost like opening a car garage on the second floor without access to it," said an official who is familiar with agro infrastructure developments.

For instance, the PM inaugurated a food park in Tumakuru in September 2014, which has remained a non-starter. The farmers in the region, and those from relatively faraway places like Kolar and Hassan, expected the park to procure their produce, but to no avail. The cold storage plants remain under-utilised.

Sudharshan, a young farmer from Srinivasapura in Kolar district, says there is no cold storage facility in Kolar district, which is the need of the hour. Hassan has five cold storage facilities on the outskirts of the city, including one government facility with a storage capacity of 1,000 tonnes at Doddamandiganahalli on Sakleshpur Road. But, only wholesale potato and fruit merchants are using these facilities.

Besides, a majority of cold storage facilities are available for large farmers who are close associates of political leaders, and not for small landholders. There is a need to form farm clusters of adjoining villages and storage facilities developed accordingly.

Lack of infrastructure, such as adequate cold storage facilities, is the main challenge in doubling farmers' income, says Suresh Patil, Dean, Agriculture College, Kalaburagi. "Inadequate storage facilities will compel farmers to sell their produce immediately after harvest at prevailing market prices, which are bound to be low," he says.

Other challenges faced by farmers are small and fragmented land-holdings, lack of access to markets where they can get good prices, market fluctuations and lack of adequate mechanisation, he says.

Kurubur Shanthakumar, president, Karnataka Sugarcane Growers' Association, says the State Advisory Price (SAP) for sugarcane needs to be fixed on time by the government. Delaying it after sugar mills start crushing will have an adverse effect. "The government must also ensure that sugar mills make payment to farmers within 14 days of procuring the crop and ensure that transportation costs are borne by the mills," he says, adding that these challenges need to be addressed first.

There is a need for aggregators who will pick up agricultural produce at the village level and take it for processing. While primary processing can happen at the village level, secondary and tertiary processing should be in bigger towns and cities before the final produce hits the markets.

A lot of money is being pumped under the Centrally-sponsored Pradhan Mantri Formalisation of Micro Food Processing Enterprises Scheme and One-District-One-Product (ODOP) to promote processing units, for which 35 per cent sub-

Farmers' incomes will not double with such knee-jerk initiatives of the government. It should fix region-specific MSP. The MSP can't be similar in Gadag and Dakshina Kannada as there is huge difference in labour costs. The MSP should be at least double the cost of production

Manohar Shetty, secretary, Karnataka Rajya Raitha Sangha

The average income of farmers has gone down drastically from 2017 to 2021. The measures implemented by the Centre failed to improve the lives of farmers. Farmers hardly got Rs 1,300-Rs 1,400 per quintal against the MSP of Rs 1,860.

sidy is given for setting up processing units. But there is a need to see it through project completion and plan implementation.

Farmers seem unaware of post-harvest technologies, processing and suitable markets and prices despite the government spending crores on different schemes and programmes. They are only taking advantage of agriculture equipment given on rental basis, while they lack interest in food-based home industries or small-scale industries using by-products and local produce due to poor market facilities.

Prakash, a small agri-based industrialist in Hassan, says the government should give importance to home industries by extending all benefits to boost the local market.

GOAL

Doubling farmers income by 2022-23 (2016-17 to 2022-23) with 2015-16 as the base year

According to DFI (Doubling Farmers Income)/ Committee's estimates, the average annual income of agricultural households in Karnataka was Rs 96,718 in 2011-12. It went up to Rs 1,54,399 in 2015-16

The target now is Rs 2,84,888 by 2022-23

All-India average was Rs 70,118 in 2011-12, which increased to Rs 96,703 in 2015-16

STRATEGY

Improvement in crop and livestock productivity; efficient use of resources

Reducing production cost

Improvement in prices received by farmers

Focus on processing, branding and marketing

Setting up of agro processing units

CHALLENGES

Cold storage facilities and other infrastructure, especially in rural areas

Ensuring better price for produce as good yield does not necessarily mean a good price

Reducing input costs

COFFEE BLUES

Coffee growers are dejected due to price crash. A string of demands of coffee growers, including waiver of interest on crop loan, is pending before the Centre.

Since Kodagu is a major coffee-producing district in Karnataka, Manu Somaiah, Kodagu district president of Karnataka Rajya Raitha Sangha, says the price of coffee beans has remained the same over past 26 years.

"The first step towards doubling the income of coffee planters is by declaring MSP. However, the state has failed to do so despite many requests from growers," he says.

Also, coffee growers do not get free electricity supply for up to 10 HP pump sets, he noted.

SEEDS FOR A PLAN

Chief Minister Basavaraj Bommai has announced the constitution of a committee headed by Agriculture Minister B C Patil to exclusively look after all post-harvest and processes.

Patil told The New Sunday Express that they are looking into secondary agriculture occupations such as dairy, fisheries, sericulture, bee-keeping and more. "We will encourage farmers to take it up along with traditional farming. This will help them get additional income," he says.

To get better markets for crops, the State Government is planning to start processing units with help of Farmers Produce Organisations (FPOs). There are over 750 FPOs in Karnataka.

"We are basically looking at each district for processing of produce. We have already given a week's training to 500 farmers at Central Food Technological Research Institute (CFTRI). This will be similar to private-public partnerships, where we involve farmers as private partners. If 500 farmers come together investing Rs 1,000 per head, it will come to Rs 5 lakh and we will give this FPO a sum of Rs 10 lakh. We will help them get all the required help, thus providing a market for their produce," the minister says.

State government is also adopting modern technologies. "The government will provide subsidies to buy modern equipment for harvesting. Besides, there is provision for Rs 8 lakh per farm bank wherein a group of 20 farmers can apply. Under this, they can buy tractors. With this, we are empowering them," he says.

On cold storages, Patil says there are 32 facilities in Karnataka. By the end of the financial year, they will add 10 more under National Bank for Agriculture and Rural Development (NABARD). There is also a proposal to set up cold storage facilities by the Horticulture Department to give farmers a confidence boost.

BUT online gambling can occur from any remote place. "The police do not have powers under existing laws to take action against online gambling. We need to strengthen the law and that is the reason we are amending the Karnataka Police Act," Jnanendra added. He said that online gambling can be tackled only with the help of technology. "We have a panel of experts and we will take action against online gambling sites. There is a need to bring strict rules and penalty clauses. Tamil Nadu suffered a setback after banning online gambling. After the order, some websites went to court, which ruled against the government. We will study the bills passed by other states on online gambling and come up with a better set of rules," he added.

In July this year, Chief Secretary P Ravikumar filed an affidavit before a division bench of the High Court in response to the direction issued to file a statement of objections on a PIL filed by DR Sharada. The chief secretary submitted that a draft Bill has been prepared for the consideration of the Cabinet after consultations with various departments and legal experts. The affidavit stated that soon after the Cabinet approves the draft bill, the Home Department will take necessary steps to place it before the legislature.

Chief Minister Basavaraj Bommai is said to be keen on banning online gambling. Soon after taking charge, he had instructed senior police officials to control this menace and other activities on the dark web and drug trafficking.

Tamil Nadu, Andhra Pradesh, Telangana and Kerala have already banned online rummy. Tamil Nadu passed the law last year when it found that many people had committed suicide after losing money on online gaming sites. The Puducherry government has written to the Union Government seeking such a ban.

AN inter-ministerial Central team will visit the flood-affected areas in Karnataka over two days starting Sunday. The officials met Chief Minister Basavaraj Bommai in Bengaluru on Saturday, during which the latter explained to them the damage caused by floods, and suggested that the team recommends to the Centre to amend the NDRF guidelines and enhance the quantum of relief provided to the state.

Karnataka has been witnessing a series of natural disasters such as floods and landslides for four consecutive years and the state needs more funds to tide over the crisis, Bommai informed the team headed by Sushil Pal, a senior official in the Ministry of Home Affairs.

Bommai said that the state is doing well in terms of rescue and relief operations, but needs more funds for crucial rehabilitation work. Karnataka has presented a report on the damage to crop and infrastructure. Damage to roads and electricity network is heavy and the state had invested heavily in these sectors over the last 15 years, Bommai said.

The seven-member team will be split into three groups and visit Belagavi, Bagalkot, Dharwad, Uttara Kannada and Haveri districts.

Cong list for polls to 25 MLC seats by month-end

DEVARAJ B HIREHALLI @ Bengaluru

CONGRESS, which is preparing to contest 25 Legislative Council seats in January, on Saturday began consultations with leaders from districts to finalise the list of candidates by this month-end.

Of the 25 outgoing members, 14 are from Congress. The party is likely to field the same members for the next election as it does not want to take any chances, party sources said. But MLC Raghu Achar is not keen on contesting from Chitradurga and wants to pick Mandya, his hometown, this time. This has put the party in a quandary as not many are willing to contest from Chitradurga as they feel they have to spend a lot of money to win the seat. Some local leaders have suggested the name of former minister H Anjaneya, but he too is reluctant as he wants to contest the Assembly polls in 2023. "He may be more keen on contesting the Assembly polls," confirmed former Lidkar chairman Shankar from Chitradurga.

At places like Tumakuru, estimated a loss of Rs 5,690.52 crore owing to floods and landslides in five districts and sought relief of Rs 765.84 crore under the SDRF norms. It has estimated crop loss on 1,94,656 hectares and horticulture crop loss on 10,076 hectares, apart from damage to 18,719 houses, 22,725 km of roads and 1,779 bridges, Revenue Minister R Ashoka said.

During their visit to the flood-hit areas, the officials will interact with affected people, local officials and also look into the details provided by the State Government. Meanwhile, the government is releasing Rs 38.65 crore to provide compensation towards crop loss to 45,586 people in 13 districts.

where Congress was the runner-up in the 2015 polls, there is intense competition for the ticket. Yalachavadi Nagaraj, who lost the Tumakuru Rural constituency in the Assembly polls, former MLA KN Rajanna's son Rajendra, who was the runner up in the 2015 Council polls, and veteran leader and ZP member Kenchamarai are the frontrunners.

Kenchamarai has given a representation to KPCC president DK Shivakumar and former deputy chief minister Dr G Parameshwar, saying he should be given the ticket as his community, SC Left, has not been represented in the Upper House.

"We have called for applications for ten days to select the candidates and we will finalise the list by the month-end"

NEP is Nagpur Education Policy: DKS

BENGALURU: The Congress has decided to raise the issue of National Education Policy-2020 in both Houses of the legislature during the upcoming session. The 10-day session will begin on September 13. KPCC president DK Shivakumar termed NEP as the Nagpur Education Policy. "Though education is in concurrent list, it (NEP) was not debated and discussed with the opposition parties. You want to impose it on us without any debate and also impose Hindi on us," he said. Though NEP has some good features, it is pro-urban as there is no infrastructure to implement the interdisciplinary subjects in rural areas, the KPCC chief said. ENS

SPECIAL DRIVE

Police raid gambling dens, nab 104

ENS @ Bengaluru

OFFICERS of the Central Crime Branch on Saturday conducted a special drive against alleged gambling, wherein two special teams raided several clubs in Halasuru, Indiranagar and Sampigehalli, and seized Rs 4 lakh in cash, gambling chips, tables, and chairs.

A senior police officer informed that the teams raided Star Lions Club, Gow Sports & Recreational Association and Cambridge Recreational Club. So far, 104 accused have been arrested, who were allegedly involved in gambling. "We also recovered Rs 4 lakh cash, gambling chips and other valuables. Some of the accused managed to escape and a special team has been formed to nab them," he said.

Preliminary investigation revealed that these clubs were running illegal gambling dens since a few months. Based on CCTV footage, the police gathered that several people were coming in the afternoon to play cards and gamble. "All the accused have been handed over to judicial custody after interrogation," he added.

Former Lokayukta Justice N Santhosh Hegde on Saturday noted that politics is very important in democracy, but it has become individual-centric today and politicians are dividing religions and preparing to divide the country on linguistic basis.

In a first, the Surya City police have confiscated movable and immovable properties worth Rs 1.6 crore belonging to an inter-state drug peddler. The accused Ajay Kumar Singh hails from Bihar, and was booked under the NDPS Act. He owns properties including three sites, a flat and an SUV, apart from a bank balance to the tune of Rs 9.7 lakh. The police in 2019, had busted a drug ring and seized 822 kg of drugs from the accused and his associates.

A senior officer said that Singh is a major peddler, who used to supply contraband to local peddlers and consumers for the last five years. He was also arrested earlier in Bihar and Delhi for drug-related offences. He sourced drugs, especially marijuana, from his contact in Odisha, and brought it into the city through a contact from Visakhapatnam.

The police took up the investigation under Chapter VA of the NDPS Act, which deals with freezing and seizing illegally acquired properties. Using his associates David Rahul and Muralidhar Anjay Kumar, Singh would peddle marijuana in the city.

'Students without access to internet, smartphones are our main concern'

DEVARAJ B HIREHALLI @ Bengaluru

Primary and Secondary Education Minister B C Nagesh, a first-timer in the cabinet, oversaw the conduct of the SSLC and PUC II examinations and also the restart of offline classes Classes 9 to 12 from August 23. From Monday, students of Classes 6 to 8 in government schools will also start attending offline classes. "On the CM's advice, offline classes for all children will be restarted in a phased manner. The interests of those children who do not have access to smart phones and internet will be topmost in our minds", he told TNSE. Excerpts from an interview:

What has been the experience so far ever since offline classes resumed for students of Class 9 to 12?

About 75 per cent of students in government schools are attending offline classes across Karnataka. Many parents were keen that regular classes resume as they were worried about their wards' education. Teachers too were concerned. Of course, there were some parents who called me to say that classes should be restarted only after 100 per cent vaccination is achieved. During my visits, some students in places like Belagavi, Dharwad and Yadgir asked for extension of classes for the full day. They feel that limited hours make no difference as they have to travel from faraway places.

What percentage of government school teachers and staff have been vaccinated so far?

About 2.6 lakh teachers and staff, which means over 95 per cent, have been vaccinated and we will achieve 100 per cent vaccination soon. So far, not even a single case of closure of school or college due to spread of infection has come to my notice.

In the coming days, much younger children will be attending offline classes. What is your take on this?

We won't force parents to send children for offline classes, but want to bring to their attention the experts' report that children are not prone to Covid-19 infection. Our intention is that the children should not miss out on education. All precautionary measures are being followed.

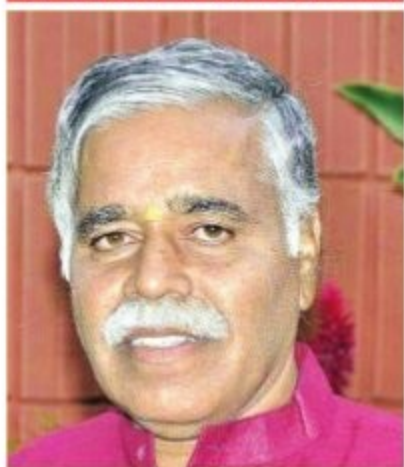

Some cases of infection among students have been reported and there is a spike on some days

But there is no spread as such, as cases have come down. Shiggaon reported zero positive cases on Thursday, and in Haveri district, the positivity rate is 0.1 per cent. When there was no sign of community spread, should we still have second thoughts about restarting classes? Although there was no study, the possibility of herd immunity in Karnataka cannot be ruled out. If not, Covid-19, which spiked in neighbouring Kerala, would have impacted Mangaluru in a big way.

Have you done any survey of students who are attending offline classes?

Yes, out of 6,41,614 samples, only 14 pupils tested positive and it boosted our morale to go ahead with reopening offline classes. Except for Mangaluru,

SUNDAY INTERVIEW

B C Nagesh, Primary and Secondary Education Minister

where the positivity rate is above 2 per cent, the infection is under control across the state. Even in Mangaluru, the Deputy Commissioner has been given the power to take a decision as in some taluks, the positivity rate is low and the elected representatives have been insisting on restarting of offline classes for children.

Are you planning to implement NEP in primary and secondary education as well?

Yes, probably from the next academic year. We need to address three issues — structural, academic and administrative — for which a task force will be set up. The curriculum and guidelines have to be prepared. It will be introduced across the state at one go.

There are complaints about Sanskrit being ignored as an optional language.

There is a feeling that if Sanskrit is given as an option, students may not learn the mother tongue, which the NEP lays stress on.

As a first-time minister, how anxious are you about attending the session?

Since I am a second-time legislator, I am confident. If needed, I will learn from my seniors. In fact, my party has trained me throughout my political career on how to be a good administrator.

There are allegations that the private school lobby had a role in restarting of offline classes?

Such allegations don't bother me. We are only concerned about the interests of students. Our main concern is about those students of government schools who have no access to internet and smartphones. If we had not restarted classes, there would have been allegations that the government is not bothered about the education of 30-40 per cent of children hailing from backward areas and communities. Some private ones are still not engaged in offline classes. We plan to go ahead in a phased manner and start classes from Class 1. If there are problems, we can consider closing offline classes.

Will wait to take call on resuming Classes 1 to 5, says Bommai

ENS @Bengaluru

CHIEF Minister Basavaraj Bommai on Saturday clarified that the state government has not considered reopening schools for Classes 1 to 5.

"We will see how things work out for Classes 6, 7 and 8, and based on that we will take further decisions," Bommai told reporters. According to officials, though schools have been allowed to restart offline classes from Monday, several schools have decided to wait. "Many schools have decided to start of-line classes only after Ganesh Chaturthi," an official said.

Meanwhile, Health Minister Dr K Sudhakar also clarified that parents need not panic and the decision for reopening lower classes will not be taken any time before the Ganesh Chaturthi. "A meeting with experts will be held after a few weeks of reopening Classes 6, 7 and 8 and only then the decision will be taken," Sudhakar said.

Speaking about large-scale events and rallies linked to political parties taking place despite restrictions, Bommai said, "We are taking all these things seriously and will announce guidelines for these events again." Several incidents of events or meetings by political parties, including the 'Jan Ashirwad Yatra' across the state, witnessed a large-scale gathering of people and violation of Covid protocols.

More Covid cases in TN schools, parents worried

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Chennai/Thanjavur/Aranyaluru/Tiruppur

Fresh cases of Covid in the State's educational institutions emerged again after two students and a school teacher tested positive on Saturday, sparking concern among parents.

The infectees are a 16-year-old student from the Government-aided Higher Secondary School in Aranyaluru; a 19-year-old student from the Kundhava Natchiyar Government Arts College for Women in Thanjavur; and a 34-year-old Tamil teacher at the Nesavalar Colony Municipal High School in Tiruppur district. It is to be noted that three students and three teachers had tested positive for Covid on Friday.

Meanwhile, the situation has triggered concerns among parents, who are mulling to switch their wards to online classes if more cases are reported. Though parents and teachers were largely in favour of reopening the schools, some of them are now worried that vaccines are not yet approved for children below 18 years.

"We have waited for about two years now. Colleges being reopened can still be accepted since the students are all eligible for vaccination against Covid. However, that is not the case with school students," said R Shanthini, a parent of a class 10 student, studying in a private school in Chennai.

Four women among eight new judges for Kerala HC

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Kochi

THE Kerala High Court will get eight more judges of whom four will be women. The Supreme Court Collegium has recommended the names of four lawyers and four judicial officers for elevation. Eight women judges — once the appointments are through after the President's assent — will be the highest in terms of female representation on the bench in the history of the Kerala HC. The number of judges will go up from 37 to 45, against the sanctioned strength of 47.

C Jayachandran and C S Sudha, principal district and sessions judges at Kottayam and Ernakulam, respectively, Kerala HC Registrar General Sophy Thomas and Subordinate Judiciary Registrar P G Ajithkumar are the judicial officers set for elevation.

Sarathi Ram Trust head Ramanathan gives sarees to women at a vaccination camp in Sankarankovil, Tamil Nadu on Saturday

SREEMATHI M @ Tenkasi

FREEBIE culture is not new to Tamil Nadu. In fact, once the election season falls upon the State, it is a common scene here. But this time, a municipality, in coordination with a non-government trust, is trying to beef up vaccination by throwing gifts. Result? An increased participation in the Covid vaccination drive.

Due to lack of people receiving vaccination against Covid-19 in Sankarankovil region, health officials from the municipality approached the Sarathi Ram Trust, headed by PGP Ramanathan (61), a cotton saree manufacturer and the vice president of the Powerloom Owners Association. The Trust, in the past, had been in-involved in volunteering activities, including blood donation camps, distribution of kabasura kudineer, a herbal concoction, and also conducting vaccination camps.

While the municipality officials had set a target of inoculating at least 42,000 people in the region, they were able to administer the jab to only about 16,000 people until Friday. That is when the Trust stepped in. "We announced that the first 100 women and men to get vaccinated at the camp will be given a cotton saree and a hot box each. We also offered them 10 more prizes, to be selected by a lucky draw. It included a 33-inch television set, a refrigerator, a washing machine, gas stoves, mixers, grinders, and iron boxes," said Ramanathan.

Stray dogs attack kid, parents seek action against civic body

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @Bengaluru

A two-year-old girl was mauled by a pack of stray dogs near HAL last Thursday, when she was playing outside her house, leaving her grievously injured. Police confirmed the incident and said that the girl is being treated at a hospital.

Meanwhile, the girl's family, who hail from Nepal, waited for the police to act against BBMP officials. However, they alleged that no legal action has been taken even after a week.

A senior police officer said, "The girl was playing alone in front of a house at Chinnappaiahahalli around afternoon, when her father Suresh S, saw her being attacked by dogs and managed to rescue her. He rushed her to a private hospital and then filed a complaint. A case of negligence has been registered against BBMP officials. The child, who suffered bite injuries on her face, hands and legs, is said to be out of danger."

Meanwhile, a notice has been issued to the officials, who are in turn blaming the contractor. "We will arrest the contractor once the investigation is completed," the officer added. The residents of the area have repeatedly complained against the increase in the stray dog population in the area.

In August 2018, a six-year-old boy was mauled to death by stray dogs when he was playing near his house at Vibhutipura in HAL. He succumbed at Bowring Hospital two days later.

Politics has become individual-centric: Justice Hegde

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @Bengaluru

FORMER Lokayukta Justice N Santhosh Hegde on Saturday noted that politics is very important in democracy, but it has become individual-centric today and politicians are dividing regions and preparing to divide the country on linguistic basis.

Speaking at the launch of VRI (We Are One), an initiative led by former state Chief Secretary Dr A Ravindra, at BMS College of Law, he highlighted the "growth of greed" in the country by giving examples of scams, starting from the Jeep scandal to the 2G scam. Justice Hegde said the country cannot see growth if public money is siphoned off and alleged that all three constitutional pillars are involved in it.

Referring to how those accused in some cases are given a rousing welcome upon release from jail on bail, he said such people used to be boycotted in earlier days. "Now, honesty has no place in society. You should change society in terms of peace and solidarity. You should lead your life by earning legitimately and be part of the change and respect and practice humanism", he advised students.

Recalling an incident when he was Karnataka Lokayukta, Justice Hegde said that he went to a hospital after receiving a complaint from the kin of an Air Force personnel from Hyderabad about postmortem not being conducted. "The superintendent had called one of two doctors who were entrusted with the job of postmortem. He came and replied to me, 'What is the hurry? I want to treat living patients'. That will be the future. Do you want to step into the shoes of such a doctor? Understand, you must change society," he urged the students.

Former IAS officer Ravindra said the initiative was launched to promote social harmony among different religious, caste and linguistic groups.

INFRA PROJECT DELAYS: LOSS OF TAX PAYER MONIES

THE road to economic recovery, economists and policy makers aver, must be paved with increased government spending on infrastructure. The ₹100 lakh crore infrastructure push, aka 'Gati Shakti Bharat Master Plan' announced on Independence Day, rests on this belief. The thesis is that government investment in infrastructure spurs demand, job creation, income, consumption and growth. The question, therefore, that begs to be asked is how efficiently are tax payer monies being spent?

The Ministry of Statistics and Programme Implementation (MOSPI) produces a detailed report every three months on the status of central sector projects costing ₹150 crore and above. The 887-page April-June 2021 report details the status of 1,779 projects — of which 12 projects were ahead of schedule, 241 on schedule, 559 delayed and for more than half, that is 967 projects, the original or anticipated date of completion is unknown. The delays, the report reveals, range between one month and 324 months.

Typically, time overruns or delays result in cost overruns or higher expenditure — effectively the tax payer pays more for the same and must wait longer in the queue of denial. So what has been the cost of the delays? Predictably, with the government, definitions of cost are frequently redefined to accommodate delays. So there is the sanctioned cost and then there is the latest approved cost.

As per the sanctioned cost, 480 projects suffered from cost overrun of 61.5 per cent, that is ₹4,46,169.37 crore. For a perspective of the higher burden on the tax payer consider this. ₹4.46 lakh crore is more than the allocation for food subsidy this year — and is almost twice the total expenditure of Gujarat budget for the year 2021. As per the 'latest approved cost', the cost of 446 projects has gone up by ₹2,53,571.33 crore — that is twice the expenditure earmarked for rural development this year — and nearly five times the expenditure of Himachal Pradesh budget for 2021-22.

Of course, the pandemic has gummed up works but the picture wasn't very different before as well. In 2020, MOSPI listed 1,698 projects of which 9 were ahead of schedule, 231 on schedule, 483 delayed and for more than half, that is 975 projects, the original anticipated date of completion was unknown. The cost overrun as per sanctioned cost was 66.7 per cent or ₹4.33 lakh crore, while the burden of cost as per 'latest approved cost' rose by ₹2.69 lakh crore.

Vignettes from the report illumine the state of state capacity — both at the level of the Union and state governments. The saga of projects, which are not complex engineering challenges, located in Delhi gives an idea of what may be the circumstance elsewhere.

In 2013, the government proposed the redevelopment and expansion of Lady Hardinge Medical College, Delhi. The project, which was to cost ₹414 crore, is delayed by over 92 months. A ground plus three storied block to house the offices of DGCA, BCAS, AERA, AAI and AAIIB in Delhi's Safdarjung Airport is delayed by 23 months. The picture is not very different elsewhere. In 1996, a rapid transport project between Belapur and Uran in Maharashtra was initiated at an estimated cost of ₹495 crore to be completed in 2004. Phase I was completed in 2018. Phase II is caught in "ifs and buts". Delayed by over 216 months, the project could cost over ₹2,900 crore.

In 2016, the Airport Authority of India proposed construction of a new ATC Tower at Kolkata airport. Reason: following the construction of the new terminal building the "view of the operational area is partially blocked". You would think this was a project which demanded urgency. The project is delayed by over 21 months. Three rural roads projects in Tripura under the PMGSY are running 74, 69 and 63 months behind schedule.

What is riveting is that the reasons for delays are virtually unchanged since a decade and more. In March 2013, a report on mega projects listed the cause for delays as: "delay in land acquisition, delay in forest clearance, delay in supply of material, geological surprises, slow progress of work, Maoist activities, diversion of forest land, ROU/ROW problems, law and order, etc." The reasons for delay in July 2021 are: delay in land acquisition, obtaining forest/environment clearances, lack of infrastructure support, delay in tendering, law and order problems, geological surprises, contractual issues, delays in approvals etc. Effectively nine of the issues fall under the Union government, eleven under states, four involve policy confusion and seven related to the operational quagmire.

This week, the PMO is reported to have sought details of projects which are delayed substantially and the cause thereof to fix accountability. While this is welcome, it is also critical to examine the structural issues in governance which result in delays. The persistence of delays calls for changes in legislation, decentralisation of clearances and simplification of regulations. The efficiency of the government's processes will and must be measured particularly on how the system shepherds projects to fruition. The fact that even the government's own projects struggle to clear the regulatory roundabouts illustrates the sloth haunting the eco-system.

AZADI, AMRIT MAHOTSAV & SAVARKAR

POINT OF VIEW

T J S GEORGE

THOSE who have an ideological baggage to sell tend to overdo things, making them look foolish in the process. The latest example is the Indian Council of Historical Research (ICHR) and the way it fell into a booby trap. This is supposed to be a scholarly organisation with no links to politics and politicians. But it has now been pushed into taking political sides. The result is that the ICHR lost, and the political operators did not win.

The objective of the ICHR is to "promote and give direction to historical research." It is autonomous, but the Indian notion of autonomy is that it must fit into the Government's scheme of things. That notion created no problems when men like Manmohan Singh were in the pilot's cockpit. Things changed when the cockpit was occupied by a party that makes no effort to hide its ideological agenda. Thus, the celebration of freedom under the Azadi Ka Amrit Mahotsav turned out to be a celebration of things other than Azadi.

To begin with, they conceptualised the Mahotsav on the grandest possible scale. Citizens of India were to participate in cultural activities organised across the country for 75 weeks preceding the 75th anniversary of Independence Day. The Government formally announced the celebration with a statement reminding citizens that "The Honourable Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi has often shared his vision of building a new Atmanirbhar Bharat by the year 2022." Proposed activities ranged from "Prime Minister's scheme for nurturing young authors" to "design competition for iconic structure in Nav Bharat Udyan."

Everything is centred round the Prime Minister's vision, all the details emerge from the Prime Minister's initiative. Which is encouraging. It means that the Prime Minister is focussed on the nation's emergence into an all-new, modernistic entity that is bound to overtake other nations with atmanirbhar dynamism. The Amrit Mahotsav put out publicity material with a garland featuring eight national leaders. One omission was as significant as one inclusion. Jawaharlal Nehru did not figure in the garland while VD Savarkar did. The political partisanship could not be more strident.

It would be interesting, academically and intellectually as well as politically, if the present dispensation achieves even a modest degree of success in removing Nehru from the formative history of India. Including Savarkar as a primary influence could be equally challenging. It was Nehru who ensured that the foundations of democracy were laid strongly enough so that even parties that he detested would be equal partners with others as democracy demanded. As a result those who detested him have a chance now to see if they can erase him from history.

Savarkar was nowhere in the picture when democracy was finding its roots in India. He was in the Andaman jail, accused of various assassination charges. He kept himself busy there with appeals to the British authorities during the continuance of war, serve the Empire by enlisting in the army?"

It is ironic that despite support by those in power, Savarkar has not found acceptance in public estimation in the country. But his historical importance can never be belittled. It was he who conceptualised the political philosophy of Hindutva. (The credit for coining the term is given to Chandranath Basu, a Bengali writer regarded as the doyen of economic nationalism in Bengal.) By deepening the communal divide, Hindutva destabilised the freedom movement and, thus, helped the British. As President of the Hindu Mahasabha, he also promoted the Two-Nation theory, just as Jinnah did for parallel reasons.

Upon release from prison, Savarkar stood by his words and actively collaborated with the British imperial rulers. Just as Subhas Bose raised the Indian National Army to fight the British, Savarkar helped the colonial government recruit lakhs of Indians into its armed forces. This is why Savarkar never received a place of honour among India's freedom fighters. It's also why Narendra Modi's advocacy will not carry much weight. On Savarkar's 132nd birth anniversary, Modi bowed before the departed leader's portrait in remembrance of "the true son of Mother India" and "his invaluable contribution to India's history." There are not many takers for that line even half a century after Savarkar's passing.

It would be interesting, academically and intellectually as well as politically, if the present dispensation achieves even a modest degree of success in removing Nehru from the formative history of India. Including Savarkar as a primary influence could be equally challenging.

for mercy. In one appeal, he said, "I am ready to serve the Government in any capacity they like... Where else can the prodigal son return but to the parental doors of the Government?" A Savarkar supporter tabled questions in the Imperial Legislative Council asking: "Is it not a fact that Mr Savarkar and his brother had once in 1915 and at another time in 1918 submitted petitions to the Government stating that they would,

BALANCING NATIONAL SECURITY & CITIZENS' RIGHTS

G MADHAVAN NAIR
Space scientist and former ISRO chairman

THE recent monsoon session of Parliament was totally disrupted on the issue of Pegasus. This was after information by some foreign agencies which alleged that the messages and data on several VIPs and officials were being tapped using Pegasus. But it is unclear who is behind this instigation. It is true that Pegasus is a spyware and can be used for war or peace.

Cyber laws are very strong in our country, and there is a strong mechanism to implement them. It is not easy to break the law of the land, but the possibility of misuse by some unruly elements cannot be ruled out. The matter is under consideration of the Supreme Court, and we will have to wait until the verdict comes out.

Today's world cannot exist without the internet, computer and cell phones. All these have made communication from any nook and corner of the world instantaneous. The revolution which has taken place through innovation, computer chips, memory devices, fiber-optic communication, mobile multimedia services etc have shrunk the entire globe to a village. Any data or news is accessible at the touch of a finger. Modern civilisation cannot sustain without these systems and gadgets.

In India, these technologies are used in almost all walks of life, much faster than even advanced countries. E-governance system using digital technology has penetrated day-to-day life even in villages as well. The mainstay for all these activities is data without which governance, business, and security cannot function. The database starting from individual details, natural resources, infrastructure, financial and commercial activities are collected and maintained by various agencies and reside in the servers maintained by Government and private agencies either in their own servers or in cloud networks. All such data for any government or commercial use — many of which are confidential in nature — has to be secured.

A lot of development has taken place to evolve various measures to protect data and make it available only to the actual users. So, there is a natural tendency by interested groups to break such protective measures to access vital information, especially used for defence of the country. Spywares are used for penetrating the firewalls and gaining access to confidential information.

Several private companies specialise in developing such software for cracking the protective system using hardware or software. There were also instances in which China, Russia as well as some terrorist groups had attempted to disrupt the computer systems of other countries. Naturally, several countries will be interested in obtaining information about other countries or groups and, in case of conflict, interfere with networks such as power grid and communication system. As a countermeasure, Governments will be interested in monitoring such hostile activities to get advanced information and take preventive measures.

In this context, the first priority is to protect the database and servers handling such information. Firewalls, encryption techniques, even physical separation of the network from the public domain are some of the means employed for this. To counter this, spy software penetrating a protection system and completely destroying or modifying the database are invented by hostile groups, and they evolve mechanisms by which such software modules can be injected into the computer network in the form of viruses without the knowledge of users. Antivirus software developed to counter such situations is effective to a large extent.

Let us look at what Pegasus is and how it has been used since 2010 by several agencies for spying on others. The original development was undertaken by an Israeli company with private equity participation from a US firm namely Francisco Partners. After 2019 onwards, the company is totally owned by the NSO group in Israel specialising in development of spyware which could be used on mobile devices operating with IOS and Android. The software is covertly installed in such devices and is capable of reading text messages, collecting call details, passwords and location, etc.

No one takes the responsibility of this spyware but this company claims that it is used by authorised government agencies only to combat terrorist activities and crime. The company also insists that it can be used only for criminal or national security investigations. The software was available in 2019. Facebook has initiated action against NSO claiming that Pegasus was used for intercepting WhatsApp communication. Probably, this is what triggered the claims by several activists in India alleging tapping of communication of several VIPs.

Internationally, this facility is believed to be used even by drug cartels in Mexico. It is claimed that Saudi Arabia with a licensed version of Pegasus has successfully monitored several terrorist groups and taken advance corrective measures. Similar instances are quoted on spying of industrial houses and banks, and by the government mechanism on the advisory or opponents. Paris-based non-profit journalism group Forbidden Stories has claimed to have access to 50,000 telephone members whose communications were intercepted by the clients of NSO. Several media personnel from the UK, France, Germany and military states were in this list. The NSO had disowned this report, and the source of allegation is unreliable.

Most of the commercial devices use IOS or Android as a standard operating system, developed, verified and controlled by smart device manufacturers, but they have no hold on the application programmes developed by others which are loaded in the smartphone devices. Such software could be more vulnerable for hacking and unauthorised installation of spyware. So the only way is to ensure that such add-on software is verified and certified by competent agencies and avoid their use to the maximum possible extent.

The spyware is like a virus similar to Covid virus. It enters a system, modifies its operation and collects the details contained in smart devices. Like the use of masks and keeping a safe distance, the solution is by providing proper shield and screening mechanism before installation of software and to avoid loading unwanted or sparingly used software modules. Another precaution which can be taken is to use a dumb device without complex bought out software and loaded only with simple modules for limited purposes of communication.

In today's world when everything is turning digital, monitoring and control of data storage and its use is the primary responsibility of any government. For this, they will have to depend on some software packages developed by reputed companies or of their own. Critical application development of protection systems and monitoring any misuse of cyber capabilities have to be taken by the Government on priority. While doing so, the freedom of expression and maintaining confidentiality of personal details are to be ensured. Adequate checks and balances are to be put in place through formal official mechanisms while monitoring social media and personal communications without compromising national security.

Revamp Indian cricket team

Notwithstanding one win so far, the performance of Indian cricket team in England is far below satisfaction. Winning one game and collapsing in two is not acceptable. Winning and losing are part of the game but losing should be honourable one. It is time the entire team is revamped by dropping some 'life members' playing for decades and by injecting new blood. Perks and perquisites being paid to the players should be performance oriented. Insisting on senior players in the name of experience is not doing good to the team. New talents are not getting the chance to show their mettle.

Help women in night shifts

This is with reference to 'Activists demand reinstatement of sacked Nimhans staffers' (Sept. 4). Workers including 15 women from the backward community, losing their jobs for raising concern about working in the night shift in Nimhans is a sad state of affairs, particularly after having served over 20 years as "contract workers". Women workers finding difficulty to attend night shifts without public transportation is a fact. Nimhans could have helped in providing travel assistance instead of sacking them. The institute need to be sympathetic towards these workers and reinstate them to keep up its reputation.

Taliban needs to keep its word

The world must not rush to engage diplomatically with the new Taliban "government" in Afghanistan. The onus must be on the Taliban to deserve cooperation of the rest of the world by effecting a substantial makeover for the better given its past track record of terror and subjugation, especially of women under its rule. The Taliban must stick to its promise of moderation. Nations hurrying to establish diplomatic ties with an unchanged Taliban will only confer legitimacy on its usurping power in war-torn Afghanistan in the manner they have, and what they represent.

Dissent is dirty word for some

The Delhi HC has only stated the obvious by inferring that the right to dissent is a fundamental right enshrined in the Constitution. But exercising that the right is fraught with risk as the repercussions could be severe as the government is highly sensitive to even the slightest show of dissent and could come down heavily on those inclined to be critical of the top honchos or the functioning of the governments. Several draconian acts like the Sedition Act, UAPA and NSA are routinely invoked to put all those raising their voices behind bars. This certainly does not augur well for a country that claims to be the largest democracy in the world.

Stop blaming Biden

The rampant criticism and talks about ousting the US President is overstated. The US was pretty certain that the 20 years of training it provided in Afghanistan would be suffice to confront the Taliban. However, it ostensibly defied its imagination. Joe Biden only followed by the deal which was signed by Donald Trump. Moreover, those who are denouncing US forces ought to decipher that they are only shutting the stable door after the horse has bolted. One can now only anticipate from the Taliban to comply with the international laws and shun the path of repression and brutality.

JEE (Main) results on schedule despite probe, says edu secy

SUMI SUKANYA DUTTA
@New Delhi

RESULTS of the final session of Joint Entrance Examination (Main) this year are expected on schedule despite a controversy that erupted after it emerged that at least one of the examination centres may have been manipulated and its devices hacked.

Talking to this newspaper, Union higher education secretary Amit Khare said the CBI investigation will have no impact on the results expected within a week, even though the results of one particular centre may be withheld. "The ongoing case and investigation will have no bearing on results but the National Testing Agency may take a decision on withholding the result of this particular centre (facing charges of irregularities)," Khare said.

The fourth session of JEE was held on August 26, 27, 31 and September 1, 2. Nearly 7.8 lakh students had taken the test online. The NTA is likely to release results of this test on September 10 along with the final rank cards for all four sessions held this year.

On Friday, CBI had arrested seven persons, including two directors and four employees of a Noida-based educational institute, in connection with irregularities in the entrance test, which is also the first stepping stone for admission into the Indian Institutes of Technology (IITs).

As per the FIR registered on Thursday, the accused were manipulating the online examination of JEE (Mains) and facilitating aspirants to get admission to top NITs (National Institute of Technology) in return for a huge amount by solving the question paper of the applicant through remote access from a chosen examination centre in Haryana.

"It was also alleged that the accused used to obtain 10th and 12th marksheets, user IDs, passwords and post-dated cheques of aspiring students in different parts of the country as security and once admission was done, they used to collect a heavy amount ranging from ₹12 lakh to ₹15 lakh per candidate," CBI spokesperson RC Joshi had said.

The issue was also raised by senior Opposition leaders, including Congress vice-president Rahul Gandhi, who accused the Union government of covering up the matter.

Hope names of judges are cleared quickly: CJI

68 names forwarded for various HCs; Chief Justice of India expects Centre to be as swift as with SC appointments

Chief Justice of India NV Ramana (C) during his felicitation at the Bar Council of India in New Delhi on Saturday | SHEKHAR YADAV

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ New Delhi

WITH the Supreme Court collegium recommending names for elevation to various high courts, Chief Justice of India NV Ramana on Saturday said he is hoping that the Centre will clear these recommendations at the earliest.

During a function organised by Bar Council of India to facilitate the CJI, where Law Minister Kiren Rijiju was also present, he lauded the Centre's move to clear all the nine names for appointment to Supreme Court in a week's time.

"I told him (Kiren Rijiju) that pending vacancies are an issue and he cleared all the nine names within seven days. This was a record time. I expect the same speed for the high court names recommended by us. With a young and dynamic law minister in office, we can expect positive developments at a rapid pace," the CJI said.

The collegium headed by CJI Ramana, has in the past 10 days alone, recommended 68 names for appointment to various high courts. A number of recommendations were made prior to that as well.

"Collegium recommended 82 names yesterday for high courts. We hope the Centre will clear these names as the nine names for Supreme Court was cleared," the CJI said.

The CJI also said that while he received praise for appointing nine judges to the top court in a short span of time, it was actually the entire Collegium which put in the effort.

"You all praised me for the appointments but I am no Tendulkar. It was team work (refers to the Supreme Court collegium)," CJI Ramana said.

The CJI also lamented the poor representation of women in the judiciary and said, "After 75 years of independence one would expect 50 per cent of women representation at all levels, but we have been able to achieve only 11 per cent in the Supreme Court."

Since its establishment till date, the Supreme Court has had only 11 women judges out of more than 250 judges.

Onus on Centre to pay heed to names reiterated

KANU SARDA @ New Delhi

CHIEF Justice of India NV Ramana's move to clear 68 names for elevation as judges in 12 high courts across the country is not only a record in itself, but also a reiteration of several names despite the Centre's objection. It will be interesting to see what happens next.

According to the Memorandum of Procedure (MoP), the collegium's reiteration over a name is binding on the government. So, the onus is now on the Centre to pave way for the appointments.

The Supreme Court collegium reiterated the name of advocate Amitesh Banerjee, son of former SC Judge Justice UC Banerjee, for elevation as judge at Calcutta High Court. His father, Justice Banerjee, had headed the probe panel set up by the then UPA government in 2004 to rule out any foul play in the 2002 Sabarmati Express fire in Godhra, which triggered violent communal riots in Gujarat.

Last week, the Centre had sent back files of 14 names recommended by the collegium for five high courts. Two of them were sent back a second time, disregarding the fact that they were sent again by the collegium for consideration.

According to a resolution, uploaded on the top court's website on Friday night, four names were cleared for Calcutta High Court, including Amitesh, two for Jammu and Kashmir and one for Rajasthan and two for Karnataka. The collegium is yet to take a decision on four names related to the Delhi High Court and one for Kerala High Court.

While the list related to Calcutta HC that was sent back had five names in it, the collegium has reiterated only four. The resolution does not make note of the collegium's decision regarding the fifth name. These five names were cleared by the SC collegium in July 2019.

Similarly, one of the two names for Karnataka High Court has been reiterated for a second time, indicating the firm approach being adopted by the collegium.

The lone name reiterated for Rajasthan High Court was among the two recommendations sent by the collegium in July, 2019. While the government had notified the appointment of one in November 2019, it chose to send back the other.

'Historic' Karbi Anglong pact signed

PRASANTA MAZUMDAR
@Guwahati

THE Centre on Saturday signed a peace accord with five armed groups based in Assam's Karbi Anglong, resolving a decades-old crisis while ensuring the territorial integrity of the state.

The agreement was signed in the presence of union home minister Amit Shah, Assam chief minister Himanta Biswa Sarma and top leaders of the five outfits, which joined the mainstream last year after laying down their weapons.

Shah as well as Sarma described the day as "historic." "...The Modi government is committed to resolving the decades-old crisis, ensuring the territorial integrity of Assam," Shah tweeted.

Stating that peace was returning to Karbi Anglong after long, he said since Narendra Modi became the Prime Minister in 2014, he started working for peace, progress and development of Northeast. "September 4 will be written in golden letters in the history of Assam and Karbi Anglong. One thousand members of five armed groups have laid down weapons and joined the mainstream," Shah said.

According to some key points of the "memorandum of settlement," a committee shall assess the rehabilitation needs of the members of the armed groups based on age profile, educational qualification, general area of residence, etc. Cases against them for non-heinous offences will be withdrawn as per law. These will be reviewed on a case to case basis, according to the existing policy on the subject.

The Assam government will provide a financial compensation of ₹5 lakh to each of the next of kin of persons who died in agitations related to the autonomous state and have not yet been compensated. The Centre may allocate ₹500 crore (₹100 crore per annum) for the development of infrastructure in the KAAC area. Additionally, it will contribute ₹500 crore (₹100 crore per annum) for development of the area.

The Centre may expedite the passage of the Constitution (125 Amendment) Bill, 2019 which proposes to rename KAAC as Karbi Anglong Autonomous Territorial Council and increase the number of members to not more than 50, of whom six, including at least two women members, will be nominated by the Governor.

Dissenting Cong leaders may get plum positions

RICHA SHARMA @ New Delhi

AS a group of rebel Congress leaders (G-23) continues to attack the leadership, the party high command in order to placate the dissident group, plans to accommodate them in committees on key issues and at vacant positions in the organisation with a big reshuffle on the cards. The group has been keeping the party on toes with continued criticism.

"It is a move that the party wants them to be part of key decisions irrespective of their continued criticism of the functioning of the party," said a senior party leader.

Ghulam Nabi Azad, one of the letter writers, has been part of the recently constituted committee under former Prime Minister Manmohan Singh to plan and coordinate the one-year long celebrations of the 75th anniversary of Independence. The list includes two other members of the G23 — Bhupinder Singh Hooda and Mukul Wasnik as convener.

With growing support for caste census in the country, the party constituted a committee under Veerappa Moily as convener to study the matters related to the issue. Moily was also among the group that wrote to Congress chief Sonia Gandhi in August 2020 over leadership issues and organisational elections.

Former Union minister Jitin Prasada, who recently joined the BJP, and Milind Deora, who was considered close to congress leader Rahul Gandhi, were also part of a group of dissidents. There were rumours about Deora also switching sides and now he has been roped in by the party as part of a countrywide press conference being done on the National Monetisation Plan.

There are also reports that Deora is likely to find a place in working committee. There are four vacant seats there, with Prasada, Sushmita Dev and Jyotiraditya Scindia leaving the party and one due to the passing away of Rajeev Satav.

APPEASEMENT FORMULA?

In order to quell the storm brewing within the party, the Congress high command headed by interim president Sonia Gandhi wants to hand out important positions to the dissenting leaders in various committees.

Centre asks Northeast & hill states to speed up full vaccination of 60-plus

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ New Delhi

THE Centre on Saturday nudged Northeastern and hill states, where the first dose of Covid-19 vaccine is being prioritised over the second, to ensure full coverage of the 60-plus population, most vulnerable to severe coronavirus infection.

In a review meeting of vaccination in the Northeastern states, apart from Jammu & Kashmir, Ladakh and Uttarakhand, Union health secretary Rajesh Bhushan said that the states need to quickly saturate the first dose coverage among the 18-plus category.

However, he insisted, the states also must also focus on the 60-plus group as the coverage of both doses in this category is unsatisfactory in Assam, Manipur, Arunachal Pradesh, Nagaland and Meghalaya.

The vulnerability of this age group makes this exercise of prime importance, underlined Bhushan. The states were also apprised that the administration of the first dose has progressively outpaced the administration of second dose and therefore it may be necessary to earmark dose and days and set a target for the completion of the exercise for the beneficiaries due for second doses.

The Centre also took stock of the state-wise balance stock of 0.5 ml syringes used in administering the jabs and vaccination coverage among special groups such as transgenders, persons with disabilities and prisoners apart from coverage among women particularly pregnant and lactating women was also discussed.

States were advised to closely monitor the stock from state vaccine stores to cold chain point, check rational distribution and restrict vaccine wastage to below 2%, update data on electronic vaccine intelligence network on a daily basis apart from other essential supplies necessary for inoculations.

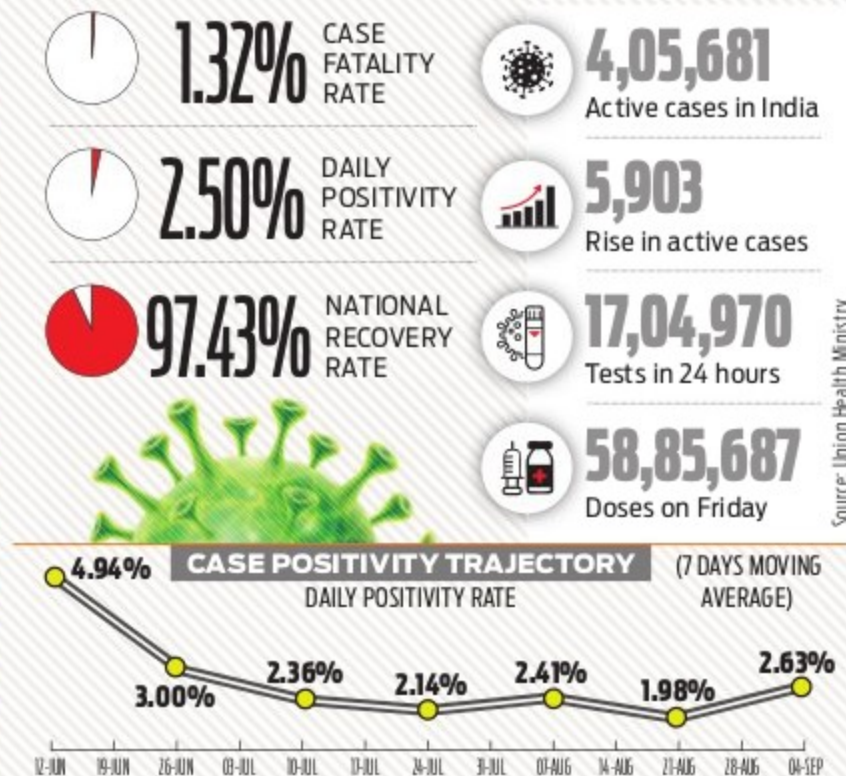

Over 66 cr doses supplied

More than 66.07 crore Covid-19 vaccine doses have so far been provided to states by the Centre for free and under the direct state procurement category, health ministry said on Saturday

COVID TRACKER

NAMITA BAI PAI @ Lucknow

A special Lucknow court on Thursday invoked "waging war against India" charges on eight persons arrested by the Anti-Terrorist Squad (ATS) of the UP Police for illegal conversions. On June 21, the ATS had nabbed two clerics — Mohammad Umar Gautam and Mufti Qazi Jahangeer Qasmi — from Delhi and claimed to have busted a huge conversion racket.

Later, eight more were arrested for carrying out conversions under the banner of Islamic Dawah Centre. In its application, the ATS claimed it found the group was not just involved in illegal conversions, but also wanted to disrupt the population balance and create a rift among people. Accepting the ATS' application, the court invoked Section 121-A and 123 of IPC against the eight persons. IPC Section 121 deals with waging or attempt to wage war against Government of India.

Eastern UP districts in grip of mystery fever

Concern as cities emerge from flood; govt reserves beds in hosps

NAMITA BAJPAI @ Lucknow

THE mystery fever that has spread panic across UP, with cases reported from several districts, is now expected to spread its tentacles further in the eastern districts of the state in the aftermath of widespread rain and floods.

As Sangam city in Prayagraj (Allahabad) emerges from flood, it is now a potent breeding ground for mosquitoes. So far, around three dozen cases of dengue have been confirmed in Sangam city, with a majority—22 cases—reported from urban areas and 12 from rural areas. More than a dozen patients have been discharged, while the rest are undergoing treatment at various government and private hospitals.

According to health authorities, the situation in Prayagraj is under control and no deaths due to dengue or viral fever have been reported. "There are no deaths due to dengue as of now. Isolation wards are available at hospitals for the treatment of dengue patients and medicine had also been arranged for. Along with this, blood banks have been asked to be ready to help, if platelets are needed. People are being made aware of the importance of cleanliness. to keep dengue at bay," said Additional Chief Medical Officer Dr Satyendra Rai. He claimed that a door-to-door survey has been carried out covering 200 houses in Govindpur area of Teliarganj. Sources said mosquito larvae were found in 80 houses.

According to a government report, 497 cases of fever were reported in Uttar Pradesh in the last 24 hours. Of this, dengue has been confirmed in 409 cases while the remaining 66 cases are suspected and, in 22 cases, the cause behind fever is not yet clear.

After Mathura, Firozabad, Varanasi, Lucknow, Kanpur, Basti and Meerut districts, there are concerns over the spread of dengue in Prayagraj. But experts believe it is an infection triggered by weather.

Meanwhile, the state government has decided to reserve beds equipped with oxygen facilities for the treatment of viral diseases, including dengue.

CM Yogi Adityanath has issued instructions to officials to ensure that patients get the best of treatment and that there was no shortage of medicines.

BJP SORE AS EC GRANTS EXCEPTION TO DIDI

PRANAB MONDAL @ Kolkata

IN a major relief to West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee, the Election Commission on Saturday announced bypolls to Bhowanipore Assembly seat on September 30. The TMC MLA from Bhowanipore had vacated his seat to enable Mamata to contest and get elected from there before the November 5 deadline, within which she was constitutionally required to become an MLA for retaining her post.

However, given the second wave of the pandemic, there was speculation whether the bypoll dates would be announced before November 5. The commission also announced polls to two West Bengal Assembly seats — Samsherganj and Jangipur — where elections could not be held earlier this year. The results of the byelection and the elections will be announced on October 3.

Prefacing its decision on a special request from the West Bengal chief secretary, the commission said: "Considering the constitutional exigency

CAMPAIGN PERIOD

The EC said since political parties had already availed of the canvassing period for the three seats from April 29 to May 3, campaigning will only be allowed only from September 20 and special request from state of West Bengal, it (the commission) has decided to hold byelection in 159-Bhowanipore AC." The poll panel said the chief secretary assured that the Covid-19 situation in the state was fully under control before requesting for the bypoll citing 'administrative exigencies and to avoid vacuum in the state'.

The poll panel's decision left the BJP's Bengal unit bristling. BJP state president Dilip Ghosh said: "Byelection is not being held in other states citing the pandemic. Is there no Covid in Bhowanipore?"

The panel has decided not to hold bypolls to 31 Assembly and three Lok Sabha seats across the country, citing Covid-19.

18 mahapanchayats planned, 300 groups to take part in 1st

NAMITA BAJPAI @ Lucknow

THE Samyukta Kisan Morcha (SKM), an umbrella organisation of farmers protesting against the Centre's farm laws, is all set to organise a mahapanchayat in Muzaffarnagar in western Uttar Pradesh on Sunday.

Sources said farmers will hold 18 such mahapanchayats in Uttar Pradesh in the first phase of their campaign.

According to sources in the Bharatiya Kisan Union, around 300 active organisations of farmers, labourers, employees, students, teachers, women and social groups will take part in Sunday's mahapanchayat.

Around 2,000 farmers are expected to reach Muzaffarnagar from Punjab alone to take part in the event. At least another 500 is expected to come from the protest sites at the Delhi border. A total of 500 buses have been arranged to bring farmers to Muzaffarnagar from various places. According to farmer leader Rakesh Tikait, farmers will converge in Muzaffarnagar from different parts of the country.

According to SKM sources, about 5,000 volunteers are working to ensure that farmers reach the maidans by Sunday.

"All arrangements have been made. We have arranged 12-14 screens and 4-5 fields for those who are unable to reach due to the crowd," Tikait said.

However, the district administration will deploy six companies of provincial armed constabulary and two companies of rapid action force in Muzaffarnagar.

The farmers' protest against the three contentious laws has been going on for over nine months since they first arrived at the Delhi borders. The farmers have been demanding the repeal of the laws, which they are afraid will do away with the MSP system, leaving them at the mercy of big corporations. Over 10 rounds of talks with the government have failed to break the deadlock.

NCP drops farmer leader from MLC list

SUDHIR SURYAWANSHI @ Mumbai

THE controversy in Maharashtra over the appointment of 12 MLCs refuses to die. Now, it has taken a twist with NCP deciding to drop farmer leader Raju Shetti's name from the list and bring in Hemant Takale, a close aide of party chief Sharad Pawar.

Shetti, a former Lok Sabha MP and president of Swabhimani Shetkari Sanghatana, one of the alliance partners of the Maha Vikas Aghadi government, criticised the NCP after it emerged that his name was dropped.

Chief Minister Uddhav Thackeray, deputy chief Minister Ajit Pawar and Congress Minister Balasaheb Thorat met Governor Bhagat Singh Koshyari and informed him of the change in the list. Sources said NCP leader Ajit Pawar was told that Shetti, who lost the Lok Sabha election in 2019, cannot be nominated for MLC through the governor's quota. The governor also expressed displeasure over the inclusion of NCP leader Eknath Khadse, citing the ED probe against him.

Earlier, Ajit Pawar hinted that the party may drop the name of Shetti from the MLC list. He said, as per some legal point, if a person has lost an election recently, he cannot be appointed as MLC.

Families of martyrs slam Bagh renovation

HARPREET BAJWA @ Chandigarh

THE renovation of the Jallianwala Bagh at Amritsar has drawn flak from the martyrs' families who allege that such steps were an attempt to erase their ancestors' memory.

These families have written to the Union Ministry of Culture objecting to the renovation of martyr's well, into which hundreds of freedom fighters had jumped in a bid to save their lives from the reckless firing ordered by British general Reginald Dyer. They have demanded revival of the original landscape and architecture. Sunil Kapoor, president of Jallianwala Bagh Freedom Fighters Foundation, said: "We have offered our suggestions to Raghvendra Singh, secretary, Ministry of Culture. There are a few major flaws in the renovation of the monument. The narrow alley through which one enters has been totally changed with murals being erected and iron grills put up. These should be immediately removed and the pristine look restored. The narrow passageway is witness to the cruelty of the British troops who killed hundreds of innocent people."

The second is the Amar Jyoti flame which was earlier at the entrance of the memorial but has been shifted in the rear of the monument.

'Covid Sahayata Kendra' comes up in Guwahati

A Covid Sahayata Kendra (CSK) has come up in Guwahati recently. Its prime purpose is to promote awareness about Covid-19 and help the state prepare to deal with the ongoing pandemic effectively. The centre is the brainchild of Child In Need Institute (CINI), an NGO that has been working for the last 47 years in the health sector. The CINI reached out to people in different remote areas of the country since the start of the pandemic. It has remained active in helping people fight the pandemic. It established its first CSK in Assam with the objective of helping people fight the virus.

Assam Governor Jagdish Mukhi has insisted on girls completing their education. He said it is necessary to give them the opportunity to get educated and contribute to the growth of the nation. He said Assam has accorded top priority to women's education. After visiting Kalyani Niwas, a shelter house for girls in Guwahati, the governor said, "Since education is the prime mover of development, it should be compulsorily provided to all girls and encourage them to study, become educated and contribute to the growth of the country." He also advocated proper guidance to an individual during childhood as it is a crucial phase for personality formation in a person's life. Since childhood is the most formative period in one's life, all efforts should be taken to ensure that children enjoy their childhood, Mukhi said.

Sarma highlights IIT-Guwahati's achievements

the institute was the result of the historic Assam agitation. It came into existence as a result of the collective aspirations of the people, and as such, its responsibility to the state and its people increases manifold, the CM said. He requested faculties, students and alumni to remain connected with the state in their entire life.

Chief Minister Himanta Biswa Sarma this week praised the Indian Institute of Technology, Guwahati (IIT-G). The CM said the institution has made a name for itself in a short span of three decades by imparting high quality technical education. He said the institute has produced several globally competitive leaders and has been credited for numerous researches that have significantly benefitted the society. Speaking at the IIT-G's 28th Foundation Day, Sarma said

NRC coordinator accused of corruption

Assam Public Works (APW), an NGO, will move the Gauhati High Court over the alleged misappropriation of '360 crore by the office of the state coordinator for National Register of Citizens (NRC) during the updation of document between 2014 and 2019. Prateek Hajela, an IAS officer, was serving as the NRC state coordinator during the period. APW chief Abhijeet Sarma said it was found in the inspection report that Central funds were siphoned off. Earlier, Sarma had filed cases with Central Bureau of Investigation and Criminal Investigation Department against Hajela.

Taliban special forces bring abrupt end to women's protest

As demonstrators reach presidential palace, special forces run into crowd and fire in the air • Women protesters demand equal rights from new rulers

KABUL

IALIBAN special forces in camouflage fired their weapons into the air on Saturday, bringing an abrupt and frightening end to the latest protest march in the capital by Afghan women demanding equal rights from the new rulers.

The women's march — the second in as many days in Kabul — began peacefully. Demonstrators laid a wreath outside Afghanistan's Defense Ministry to honor Afghan soldiers who died fighting the Taliban before marching on to the presidential palace.

"We are here to gain human rights in Afghanistan," said 20-year-old protester Maryam Naiby. "I love my country. I will always be here."

As the protesters' shouts grew louder, several Taliban officials waded into the crowd to ask what they wanted to say. Flanked by fellow demonstrators, Sudaba Kabiri, a 24-year-old university student, told her Taliban interlocutor that Islam gave women rights and they wanted theirs. The Taliban official promised women would be given their rights but the women, all in their early 20s, were skeptical.

As the demonstrators reached the presidential palace, a dozen Taliban special forces ran into the crowd, firing in the air and sending demonstrators fleeing.

Kabiri, who spoke to The Associated Press, said they also fired tear gas.

The Taliban have promised an inclusive government and a more moderate form of Islamic rule than when they last ruled the country from 1996 to 2001. But many Afghans, especially women, are deeply skeptical and fear a roll back of rights gained over the last two decades. For much of the past two weeks, Taliban officials have been holding meetings among themselves, amid reports of differences among them emerging. AP

Murals whitewashed

Taliban members whitewashed murals on Saturday that promoted health care, warned of the dangers of HIV and even paid homage to some of Afghanistan's iconic foreign contributors, like anthropologist Nancy Dupree, who singlehandedly chronicled Afghanistan's rich cultural legacy. The murals were replaced with slogans congratulating Afghans on their victory. A Taliban cultural commission spokesman, Ahmadullah Muttaqi, tweeted that the murals were painted over "because they are against our values. They were spoiling the minds and instead we wrote slogans that will be useful to everyone."

US expects to admit over 50K evacuees

WASHINGTON: At least 50,000 Afghans are expected to be admitted into the United States following the fall of Kabul as part of an 'enduring commitment' to help people who aided the American war effort and others who are particularly vulnerable under Taliban rule, the secretary of homeland security has said. Tens of thousands of Afghans have already made it through security vetting and arrived in the US to begin the process of resettlement. Exactly how many more will come and how long it will take remain open questions, DHS Secretary Alejandro Mayorkas said as he outlined the effort. "Our commitment is an enduring one," he told reporters. "This is not just a matter of the next several weeks. We will not rest until we have accomplished the ultimate goal."

'World must engage with Af to prevent refugee crisis'

ISLAMABAD

PAKISTAN Prime Minister Imran Khan on Saturday said the world should engage with Afghanistan to address humanitarian needs and provide economic stability to prevent a refugee crisis in the war-torn country.

Khan spoke with Secretary General of the United Nations Antonio Guterres over telephone and the two leaders discussed the developments in Afghanistan, with a particular focus on the humanitarian situation. Khan underscored the need for the international community to become more engaged with Afghanistan, according to urgent priority to addressing the humanitarian needs and ensuring economic stability. "Such steps would not only reinforce security but also preclude any exodus of Afghans from their country, thus preventing a refugee crisis in Afghanistan," he said.

PANJSHIR RESISTANCE HOLDS

KABUL

FRESH fighting was reported on Saturday between the Taliban and resistance forces in Afghanistan's Panjshir Valley.

Panjshir, which held out for nearly a decade against the Soviet Union's occupation and also the Taliban's first rule from 1996-2001, is stubbornly holding out. Fighters from the so-called National Resistance Front (NRF) — made up of anti-Taliban militia and former Afghan security forces — are understood to have stockpiled a significant armoury in the valley, around 80km north of Kabul and guarded by a narrow gorge.

Celebratory gunfire rang out in the capital Kabul overnight as rumours spread the valley had fallen, but the Taliban made no official claim Saturday. Celebratory gunfire rang out in the capital Kabul overnight as rumours spread the valley had fallen, but the Taliban made no official claim on Saturday.

The Emergency Hospital in Kabul said two people were killed and 20 wounded by the salvos, as the Taliban tweeted a stern admonishment warning its fighters to stop.

"Avoid firing in the air and thank God instead," said chief spokesman Zabihullah Mujahid, tipped to become the new regime's information minister.

In Panjshir, former vice-president Amrullah Saleh, holed out alongside Ahmad Massoud — the son of legendary anti-Taliban commander Ahmad Shah Massoud — admitted the perilous position of NRF. "The situation is difficult, we have been under invasion," Saleh said in a video message. AFP

Biden moves to declassify documents on 9/11 attacks

WASHINGTON

PRESIDENT Joe Biden has directed the declassification of certain documents related to the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks, a supportive gesture to victims' families who have long sought the records in hopes of implicating the Saudi government.

The order, coming little more than a week before the 20th anniversary of the attacks, is a significant moment in a years-long tussle between the government and the families over what classified information about the run-up to the attacks could be made public.

That conflict was on display last month when many relatives, survivors and first responders came out against Biden's participation in 9/11 memorial events if the documents remained classified.

Biden said on Friday that he was making good on a campaign commitment by ordering the declassification review.

Thai protesters hit streets as PM clings to power

BANGKOK

PRO-DEMOCRACY protesters vented their anger in Bangkok's heavy rain on Saturday after Thai Prime Minister Prayut Chan-O-cha survived a no-confidence vote in parliament.

More than 300 demonstrators marched in central Bangkok's main shopping mall district carrying red flags and wearing ponchos in the downpour.

"The government should be gone. If things were good why would we come out to protest?" said a 28-year-old demonstrator.

Ahead of the rally, police used shipping containers to block major routes to the advertised protest site at the central Lumpini Park where protesters had planned to march.

There was heavy police presence across the downtown area with riot police and a water cannon truck stationed at the Ratchaprasong intersection near major shopping malls.

This week Thai lawmakers debated an opposition-instigated censure motion about the government's handling of the coronavirus pandemic and economic management — Saturday was the third no-confidence motion vote since the 2019 election.

The sluggish roll out of Thailand's vaccination programme and financial pain from restrictions has heaped political pressure on Prayut's government.

The country is reeling from its worst economic performance since the 1997 Asian Financial Crisis as well as a deadly third wave of coronavirus infections.

Prayut defended his government's handling of the pandemic in parliament earlier this week.

"Thailand's death rate from Covid is comparatively very low, but we must make sure that there will be no more deaths," Prayut said, adding the decision not to access doses under the global Covax vaccine equity programme was in Thailand's best interest.

In the morning, Prayut and five cabinet ministers clung to power after garnering enough support on the floor of parliament, following a week of speculation some members of the ruling coalition were plotting to withdraw support.

IDA EVACUEES URGED TO RETURN TO NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS

WITH power due back for almost all of New Orleans by next week, Mayor LaToya Cantrell strongly encouraged residents who evacuated because of Hurricane Ida to begin returning home. But outside the city, the prospects of recovery appeared bleak, with no timeline on power restoration and homes and businesses in tatters. Six days after Hurricane Ida made landfall, hard-hit parts of Louisiana were still struggling to restore any sense of normalcy. Even around New Orleans, a continued lack of power for most residents made a sultry stretch of summer hard to bear and added to woes in the aftermath of Ida.

Cantrell said the city would offer transportation to any resident looking to leave city and get to a public shelter.

India Inc rapidly turning green in hunt for capital

ESG-focussed funds skip businesses with large carbon footprints

JONATHAN ANANDA @Chennai

WHERE the money goes, corporations follow — and world over, capital is going green. And corporations are following suit rather rapidly.

Over the recent past, Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) issues have gained substantial clout in determining the amount of capital that a company can tap on the financial markets. There are now an increasing number of ESG-focused funds, venture capitalists, and private equity players that refuse to invest in businesses that have large carbon footprints, or are involved in unsustainable ventures.

This global trend has begun to see traction in India too, though it is at a far more nascent stage. According to a report by Edelweiss Securities, there were ten exclusive domestic ESG funds in the country as of the end of June, eight of which were launched only last year. And these ten funds commanded an AUM worth ₹11,800 crore — nearly four times more than the ₹2,400 crore registered at the end of June 2019. Granted, this is just a fraction of the AUM of India's overall mutual fund sector, which stood at over ₹33 lakh crore as of the end of June 2021, according to AMFI data.

"The number is nowhere close to the international markets where nearly 3,000 ESG schemes are available for investment. Nearly 33% of overall AUM in the US is in ESG-compliant funds, with a considerable amount of retail participation," pointed out Nish Bhatt, Founder & CEO, Millwood Kane International. The AUM of ESG funds in Europe is estimated at around $14 trillion, while in the US, this stands at $17 trillion.

Green bonds have also become an attractive way to raise capital for clean energy projects. JP Morgan believes that Indian firms are set to raise $10 billion in 2021 alone. So far this year, 14 Indian green bond issuances have clocked over $7 billion in funds raised, including issues by Adani Green ($750 mn), JSW Energy ($707 mn), Greenko ($940 mn), and two issues by Renew Power ($460 mn and $585 mn).

It may be early days for India, but Rishi Maheshwari, Director-Investments, White Oak Capital believes ESG-investing will only accelerate, driven by new regulatory and reporting frameworks. Another major driver is the advent of young retail investors who are far more eco-conscious and focused on sustainability. "Younger investors place a higher importance to ESG related factors," Maheshwari noted.

A large part of ESG compliance is also related to corporate governance. "Having the highest level of integrity and ethical practices for all the stakeholders, including minority shareholders, is a very important aspect considered by investors across the globe," observed Sachin Shah, Fund Manager, Emkay Investment Managers.

India Inc, meanwhile, has sensed the shift in the wind and begun adjusting sails. A couple of months ago, oil-to-telecom conglomerate Reliance Industries announced that it would invest as much as ₹75,000 crore on a new green energy business. Analysts note that this would go some way in mitigating RIL's presence in sectors such as petroleum.

JSW group and Jindal Steel and Power Ltd (JSPL) have also changed strategies. JSW Energy plans to have a predominantly green energy portfolio, with 85% comprising green and renewable sources by 2030, and has ramped up ESG focus in its steel business. "Big organisations are planning big capital expenditures in energy transition efforts and that is not small — $2 trillion per annum and it will continue up to 2050," JSW Steel's joint managing director and group CFO MVSSeshagiri Rao had said in an earlier interview with TNIE.

JSPL, meanwhile, has separated its power business from its steel business and is set to sell Jindal Power to its promoters. "In order to realise our target of becoming a 50 MTPA (from the existing 9.6 MTPA) capacity steel company, we have to give up some of the assets so that we do not violate the carbon emission norms. In the next 8-10 years, investors, lenders and buyers will stay away from companies who violate the carbon emission norms," managing director V R Sharma told TNIE recently.

Market regulator SEBI has also issued guidelines mandating ESG-related disclosures for India's 1,000 largest listed firms by FY23. These business responsibility and sustainability reports (BRSR) will cover aspects such as material environmental, social, governance risks; social-sector disclosures, value chain, communities, consumers; gender diversity etc.

ESG has moved beyond a "soft issue", into a "strategic priority", says Maheshwari. "It is now well understood that a strong ESG proposition built on sustainable growth drivers is a win-win for all stakeholders."

NEWSCOPE

BRING ON THE BULLDOZERS AGAINST THE TOWERS OF CORRUPTION

GURBIR SINGH

HERE should be trumpets and celebration when the heavy cranes and bulldozers come on to demolish Supertech's illegal Emerald Court towers in Noida. As the rule of law slowly ebbs away in the country, orders such as these offer a small glimmer of hope.

Confirming an Allahabad High Court order, a Supreme Court Bench of Justices DY Chandrachud and MR Shah has ordered housing company Supertech to demolish within 3 months two 40-storey towers built illegally. To protect the hundreds of homebuyers, the court has ordered the builders pay back their booking amounts with 12% interest.

Prodded on by the court, a special investigation team (SIT) of the UP Police is now searching out Noida Authority's colluding officials. The layers of corruption and government malfeasance will hopefully be exposed in due course.

Plaudits are due to citizen power. A dozen or so senior retired officers and residents relentlessly pursued this case in the Allahabad High Court and the Supreme Courts for 9 years. They went door to door to fund the litigation, and often travelling in crowded second-class rail coaches to reach Allahabad for the court hearings. The builders still can't believe they are at the end of the road.

Making an example

There are those that forcefully argue that bringing down illegal towers like Supertech's 'Apex' and 'Ceyane' is 'excessive', and that they should be 'regularised' with heavy penalties for future deterrence. They say the biggest losers are the homebuyers who have put in their hard-earned money. Others say the ₹5,000-crore project is a huge asset loss. Rather than demolition, these properties should be confiscated and used by government or for public purpose.

In a country where the construction industry functions with scant regard for the law, making an example of law-breakers is necessary. The former chairman of Maharashtra's Real Estate Regulatory Authority (RERA), Gautam Chatterjee, once quipped: "A law works if there is 90% compliance and the violators are 10%. If it is the other way round, it won't work."

The Pratibha building, when it was nearing completion in Mumbai in 1984, was detected with 8 additional floors and 24,000 square feet more than the sanctioned plan. After lengthy litigation, the top 8 floors of the 32-storey building were brought down in 1989; but the remaining shell stood for years at the busy intersection of Pedder and Warden roads, a posh South Mumbai district, as a loud reminder of the 'tower of corruption'. The building was finally brought down entirely in 2015.

But there is no learning. Scarcely a year ago, on 11th and 12th January, the Kerala government, on orders of the Supreme Court, blasted to rubble 5 fully-built apartment blocks in Ernakulam's Maradu municipality. A bench of Justices Arun Mishra and SR Mehta said it was a 'painful' decision but the serious coastal regulation zone (CRZ) violations, that posed a threat to life on the waterfront, left them with no choice. All the various actors were culpable: the panchayat that gave the permission, the builders who bent the law, and the buyers who failed to do their due diligence.

Corrupt officials, the bane

While the poor homebuyers may be excused of ignorance, and builders will be builders, it is the class of planning authorities, municipal supervisors, and fire and safety agencies who are the biggest culprits in this cynical game. They not only manipulate permissions and sanctions, but they knowingly put consumers at risk. Breaking building and density norms are not just paper violations. They cause damage to generations of home owners by increasing the hazards of fire and poor construction. As the Supreme Court pointed out in the Supertech case, bending the planning norms "will deprive the residents of urban areas of the amenities of light, air and ventilation which are essential to maintaining a basic quality of life."

Meanwhile, many among the wealthier echelons have been grumbling that the yardstick for demolishing illegal building constructions is not being applied to illegal slums. The latter are allowed to thrive as they serve as vote bank for politicians. This is an old, specious argument. Illegal constructions by builders are commercial scams worth thousands of crores and cannot be compared to slums. The latter proliferate as they are the only shelter for the poorest and the most desperate. Slums are the unfortunate spin-offs of high real estate prices and the lack of affordable housing.

The Supertech case has highlighted that while builders are the known villains and are put in the firing line, the layers of officials who sanctioned their illegal plans melt into the shadow. It is about time, this tribe of corrupt, blood-sucking officials are called out and punished.

For the homebuyer, the travails continue. Hidden costs, prolonged delay in delivery and a tacky product that does not resemble the flashy, enticing brochures. For all these harried consumers the rolling out of the bulldozers against these towers of deception is welcome.

Are workplaces up for mental health challenges?

SAMIKSHA GOEL @ New Delhi

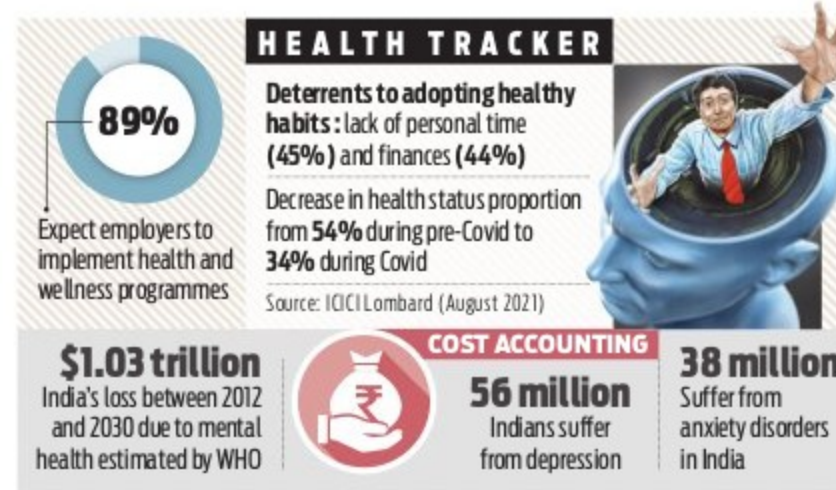

"IT was never possible to have a human interaction with my manager," a Bengaluru-based media professional, who has been struggling with mental health issues, says about one of her prior workplaces.

"I was always asked to try harder, even when I was working seven days a week for my own growth and learning."

Damini Shrivastava was told to 'buckle up' when she decided to have a conversation about her deteriorating mental health with her boss. Quitting felt like the right thing, or the only thing, as she faced 'gaslighting, low self-esteem' at the job.

Since then, Shrivastava made it a point to actively talk about mental health at all her workplaces. She is now used to awkward silences, unsolicited advice from colleagues on not speaking up or she will be labelled as 'the girl with anxiety', twisted mouths and furrowed brows.

Such is the state of workplaces in India. Only 1,000 companies are estimated to have a structured employee assistance programme (EAP) for mental health, out of the 1.1 million active companies, according to a pre-pandemic report by Optum Health International, an EAP service provider. The pandemic, however, has given the mental health conversation a push in the corporate corridors where it's usually a forbidden subject. Various companies even announced a 4-day week programme, wellness leaves for employees. But those were only temporary measures and soon rolled back. It raises important questions - Do employees only need mental health interventions when it's a pandemic? These initiatives should be lauded, but what about a regular, non-pandemic day?

Almost one in every three people's personal life stands affected due to work stress, according to a recent survey. The study by ICICI Lombard published in August, 2021 revealed that Covid has taken a toll on the mental health of those who are partly working from home, showing a noticeable decrease in the health status proportion from 54% during pre-Covid to 34% during the post-Covid era. Several other studies portray a similar grim picture.

The study also points out that 89% of people expect employers to implement health and wellness programmes.

The World Health Organisation (WHO) has noted that for every $1 invested in treating common mental disorders, there is a $4 return in improved health and productivity, which implies that it makes sense for corporations to take care of employees' mental wellness, not just as a moral motivation but also an economical imperative.

Most companies in India are aware of the returns on investment (ROI) of having an EAP, but they choose their priorities, says EAP consultant Isabel Paul, adding that EAPs do not come cheap. The average cost of an EAP, Paul estimates, is ₹5 lakh per year.

Talking about the ecosystem, Paul says that most MNCs in the country have an EAP, primarily because it's a requirement at the global level for them. On the other hand, she reckons, very few Indian-origin organisations have it. "In the US, for instance, most large companies will have an EAP or an alternate arrangement, but in India, this may not be the case," Paul adds.

Experts say, most of EAPs don't even focus on mental health and when they do, companies look at these services from a curative perspective and not a preventive measure. More often than not, it's just a tick off and companies tend to compromise on counsellors, service providers.

Parveen Shaikh, AVP: outreach, strategy & collaborations, Mpower, says, companies are focused on fixing the symptom, not the cause. "Even now, companies have started calling people to the office, but you need to ease people into it and not just announce a date for them to come back."

Talking about the challenges, Sheikh says, "We had five companies that asked us to start a helpline urgently in May. We need a minimum guarantee of three months. It's post three months now and none of them wants to renew the contract."

Deepti Srinivasan, Director, ResilienceWorks and an EAP expert, says, "We have HR people (who) tell us don't talk about stress, because they won't be able to address it and employees will start saying they are stressed and leave the company."

"Sometimes they also say please call it coaching and not counselling," Srinivasan adds.

EAP is much more necessary in India, she says, than it is in western countries, primarily, because mental health services are not covered under insurance. "If covered, it would only cover hospitalisation and not all mental health services like counselling require it."

The work culture in India glorifies slogging, which often enables employers to exploit employees' vulnerabilities, making them work for long hours. When it comes to employees' mental health, experts say, there is a long road ahead with full of awkward silences, twisted mouths and furrowed brows.

Red Bull's Max Verstappen claimed pole position for his home Dutch Grand Prix, edging championship leader Lewis Hamilton in qualifying on Saturday. Verstappen, who trails Hamilton by three points in the title race, was just 0.038 seconds quicker than the Mercedes driver who joins him on the front row on the Zandvoort circuit's first race since 1985.

NET GAIN FOR INDIA

Shuttler Pramod lives up to billing to claim gold medal, Manoj clinches bronze

FIROZ MIRZA @ Chennai

BADMINTON made its debut at the 2020 Tokyo Paralympics with seven para shuttlers including two women from the country getting an opportunity to compete at the marquee event. Expectations were high from the Indian para shuttlers ahead of the event and they lived up to it as two of them won medals including gold on Saturday. Apart from these two medallists, five from the country sailed into medal rounds.

Reigning world champion Pramod Bhagat was the star of the day as he claimed a historic gold medal in the men's singles SL3 class with compatriot Manoj Sarkar bagging bronze in the category.

Infected with polio at the age of five, lack of proper treatment caused deformity in Bhagat's leg but he continued playing sports before shifting focus on badminton in 2002. The decision paid dividends as he defeated second-seeded Daniel Bethell from Great Britain 21-14, 21-17 to finish on the top of the podium.

"It's like a dream coming true as every athlete wishes to win a medal at the grandest stage and I did this today by winning a gold medal," said Bhagat in an interaction facilitated by the official broadcaster Eurosport and Paralympic Committee of India (PCI).

The final scores might suggest Bhagat had won the gold medal match comfortably but it was far from easy, especially in the second game where he was trailing 4-11. "I always think that I am the best. Even coach Gaurav Khanna sir was confident that I can finish off the match in straight sets," said Bhagat.

Coach Khanna affirmed that Bhagat had made such comebacks in the past and he was confident of him winning the game. "We trained simulating match situations and making a comeback is not new for Bhagat," he said.

Meanwhile, Khanna's other ward Sarkar made it two by bagging bronze. The 31-year-old Sarkar, whose right leg was affected after he contracted polio when he was a teenager, won 22-20, 21-13 against Japan's Daisuke Fujihara.

And the medal rush in badminton will continue for the country and coach on Sunday as Suhas Yathiraj and Krishna Nagar also sailed into the men's singles finals of SL4 class and SH6 class respectively assuring themselves at least a silver each. Tarun Dhillon too stayed in contention for bronze after losing his semifinals earlier on Saturday.

MEDAL OF HONOUR

Bang on target! Manish, Singhraj dominate show

ASHIM SUNAM @ Bengaluru

INDIA'S Manish Narwal was looked upon as a serious medal contender at the Tokyo Paralympics. He had some big medal-winning performances in the last four to five years. But, on Tuesday, he was disappointed and angry with himself as he finished seventh in the men's 10m air pistol SH1. After missing out in his pet event, Narwal knew that the mixed 50m pistol SH1 was his last shot at a podium finish, and he delivered gold with a Paralympic record of 218.2 on Saturday.

However, the young boy from Ballabgarh, Haryana, who has an impairment in his right hand, did not pick up the art of shooting straight away. Initially, he loved outdoor sports and wanted to become a football player. It was around 2016 when his father was informed about shooting range in a nearby place, and he was taken to the venue. The youngster fell in love with the sport there on, and rigorous training and hard work led him to Tokyo, where he has brought laurels to the country.

But, this gold medal means much more. Coach JP Nautiyal was waiting for this day. And when it happened, Nautiyal and Narwal were involved in an embrace and they had tears of joy in their eyes. Nautiyal further opened up on how he helped the shooter prepare him mentally in the last few days to avoid another upset.

"I knew about his potential. Heading into this (mixed 50m pistol SH1) event, I wanted him to have that belief. Shooting is a mental sport. In the last two days here, we made him relax, took him out for a walk around the village and cracked a few jokes to keep him at ease," Nautiyal told this daily from Tokyo. Nautiyal's joy did not end there as Singhraj Adhana secured silver with 216.7 in the same event, helping India finish one-two.

Osaka crashes out, to take break from tennis

AFP @ New York

FOUR-TIME Grand Slam champion Naomi Osaka, wiping away tears after a stunning US Open upset loss on Friday, said she will take an indefinite break from playing tennis. "I honestly don't know when I'm going to play my next tennis match," Osaka said, choking up and wiping away tears. "I think I'm going to take a break from playing for a while."

With that, the defending US Open champion put on her Covid-19 facemask, rose and ended the news conference after losing to Canadian teen left-hander Leylah Fernandez 5-7, 7-6 (2), 6-4.

Tsitsipas exits

Carlos Alcaraz dug deep for the best tennis of his career when it mattered most and the 18-year-old Spaniard was rewarded with a dream upset of third-ranked Stefanos Tsitsipas. Alcaraz reached his first Grand Slam fourth round by upsetting the Greek star 6-3, 4-6, 7-6 (2), 0-6, 7-6 (5).

Sania-Rajeev pair out

The Indo-American pair of Sania Mirza and Rajeev Ram made a first round exit from the US Open mixed doubles event after losing to Dayana Yastremska from Ukraine and Australia's Max Purcell, here. They lost 3-6 6-3, 7-10.

Select results (3rd Rd): Men: C Alcaraz (ESP) bt S Tsitsipas (GRE x3) 6-3, 4-6, 7-6 (2), 0-6, 7-6 (5); D Medvedev (RUS x2) bt P Andujar (ESP) 6-0, 6-4, 6-3; Women: E Svitolina (UKR x5) bt D Kasatkina (RUS x25) 6-4, 6-2; L Fernandez (CAN) bt N Osaka (JPN x3) 5-7, 7-6 (2), 6-4; G Muguruza (ESP x9) bt V Azarenka (BLR x18) 6-4, 3-6, 6-2.

Rohit's 1st overseas Test ton gives visitors lead

VENKATA KRISHNA B @ Chennai

IT ended with a nothing shot. One of those shots you couldn't come to terms with while watching. Before that transpired, it was a wonderfully poised Test match with Rohit Sharma in full flow. Only for it to be cut short by his own undoing more than anything else and exposing the under-fire middle-order to the second new ball. It was an exceptional innings, yet deep inside, if you let out a curse instead of applause, you could be excused, for it seemed incomplete at the same time. Rohit's centuries are supposed to be complete. Once he is set and has touched three figures, he ensures to make the opposition pay more.

That was the only thing you could accuse him of not doing at the Oval on Day 3. There were still batsmen to come, including Virat Kohli, but they haven't looked as assured in the middle as Rohit has been has on this tour. This is why the dismissal left your jaws wide open. There was a bit of shock and 'what have you done Rohit?', in the end but let's keep that aside for now. Simply because without his century, it is hard to imagine where India would be.

Since taking the step to bat at the top in Tests, no other opener has scored as much runs as Rohit, who has garnered 2,648 runs. And the 127 he made on Saturday is his joint-lowest of the five centuries he has made as an opener. In the 15 Tests in his new role, he already has a double century, a century each in both in-

SCOREBOARD

India 1st innings 191.
England 1st innings 290. India 2nd innings (o/n 43/0): Rohit c Woakes b Robins on 127, Rahul c Bairstow b Anderson 46, Pujara c Ali b Robins on 61, Virat 22 (batting), Jadeja 9 (batting). Extras (lb 3 nb 2) 5. Total (3 wkt, in 92 ovs) 270/3. FOW: 1-83, 2-236, 3-237. Bowling: Anderson 23-8-49-1, Robinson 21-4-67-2, Woakes 19-5-43-0, Overton 10-0-38-0, Ali 15-0-63-0, Root 4-7-0.

nings of a Test, and two second-innings hundreds. And his Test career is taking the same route as his limited-over career; where Rohit became a force to reckon with once he started opening. There is another similarity.

Even though Rohit became an ODI opener in January 2013, it was not till October 2013 did he score his first century in the format. He took 18 innings to get one and he did so by gradually building six fifties. While he got centuries in both innings in the first time he opened in Tests, getting centuries overseas on difficult conditions is no easy job. KL Rahul (46) and Cheteshwar Pujara (61) ensured Rohit had support at the other end. The century by Rohit meant India lead by 171 runs and have seven wickets to spare with two days to play.

WHAT ARE THESE TINY CHIPS?

If you take one quick glance across your room, it is highly likely that you will see at least one gadget that houses tiny versatile units called semiconductor chips. These chips, usually made of silicon, have revolutionised a multitude of industries, from cars to airplanes to mobile phones to gaming consoles. Today, there is a substantial shortage of these small components, forcing automakers to close factories. What gave rise to this scarcity? We take a look

EXFILE • TECHNOLOGY

WHY IS THERE A CHIP SHORTAGE?

SOPHISTICATION
A semiconductor chip integrates many smaller components like transistors and electrical connections. They are basically the building blocks of electronic devices

NUMBER OF TRANSISTORS IN A CIRCUIT

The graph represents the famous Moore's Law, which says that the number of transistors in a dense integrated circuit doubles approximately every two years.

Source: Our World in Data

Semiconductor chips, as their name suggest, conduct electricity more than an insulating material (like wood) but less than metals (like iron). However, their conductivity and other properties can be precisely controlled by introducing impurities through a process called doping

CURRENT PRODUCTION PROCESS

Chip manufacturing today use two main approaches: 200mm or 300mm silicon wafers. These values represent the diameter of the wafers used. The larger 300mm is more expensive and is used for advanced technologies while the smaller 200mm is cheaper and is used in a wide array of products. It is this older and cheaper one that is scarce today

6.6 million

WAFERS

Manufacturers are on track to boosting the production of the 200mm wafer by 950,000 units or a record 6.6 million wafers per month

WAS IT SUDDEN?

Experts say that this shortage was looming over the years and that the pandemic could not be held as the only reason

“That (pandemic) was probably just the last drop in the bucket”
Koray Köse, an analyst at Gartner told BBC

HOW LONG COULD IT LAST?

Top manufacturing companies like Intel and IBM predict that the shortage could last up to 2023

INDUSTRIES THAT FELT THE PINCH

Car makers like Toyota, Ford, Volvo, Jaguar, Maruthi and Mahindra faced issues of shortage; Apple told that their iPhone production could be hit; several small scale manufacturers were also severely struck by the shortage

ROOT CAUSES

● With the pandemic, there was stockpiling and hoarding of semiconductors that led to shortages. There was also a spurt in demand for laptops, tablets and webcams as people started working from home

● However, even before Covid-19, the rise in 5G, US' decision to prevent sale of chips to Huawei and then the tech giant flooding international market with orders all played a role in creating scarcity

● Other factors like a winter storm in Texas that shut down semiconductor factories and a fire at a Japanese manufacturing plant worsened the situation

● Shipping costs in 2021 also increased manifold due to shift in demand during the pandemic — a single 40ft container from Asia to Europe costed more than 10 times when compared to 2020

Sharks face extinction threat while tunas bounce back

Overall risk rising at alarming rate, says expert; 28% of 1.38 lakh species at risk of vanishing forever; but in ray of hope, 4 fish species pulled back from the brink

CONSERVATION

TRAPPED on island habitats made smaller by rising seas, Indonesia's Komodo dragons were listed as “endangered” on Saturday, in an update of the wildlife Red List that also warned overfishing threatens nearly two-in-five sharks with extinction.

About 28% of the 1,38,000 species assessed by the International Union for the Conservation of Nature (IUCN) for its survival watchlist are now at risk of vanishing in the wild forever, as the destructive impact of human activity on the natural world deepens.

But the latest update of the Red List for Threatened Species also highlights the potential for restoration, with four commercially fished tuna species pulling back from a slide towards extinction after a decade of efforts to curb overexploitation. The most spectacular recovery was seen in the Atlantic bluefin tuna, which leapt from “endangered” across three categories to the safe zone of “least concern”.

The species is a mainstay of high-end sushi in Japan.

“These Red List assessments demonstrate just how closely our lives and livelihoods are intertwined with biodiversity,” IUCN Director General Bruno Oberle said in a statement.

‘Clarion call’

A key message from the IUCN Congress, taking place in the French city of Marseille, is that disappearing species and the destruction of ecosystems are no less existential threats than global warming.

At the same time, climate change itself is casting a darker shadow than ever before on the futures of many species, particularly endemic animals and plants that live uniquely on small islands or in certain biodiversity hotspots.

Komodo dragons are now classified as endangered by IUCN | AFP

Komodo dragons — the world's largest living lizards — are found only in the World Heritage-listed Komodo National Park and neighbouring Flores. The species “is increasingly threatened by the impacts of climate change”. Rising sea levels are expected to shrink its tiny habitat at least 30% over the next 45 years.

Outside of protected areas, the fearsome throwbacks are also rapidly losing ground as humanity's footprint expands. “The idea that these prehistoric animals have moved one step closer to extinction due in part to climate change is terrifying,” said Andrew Terry, Conservation Director at the Zoological Society of London.

Their decline is a “clarion call for nature to be placed at the heart of all decision making” at crunch UN climate talks in Glasgow, he added.

The most comprehensive survey of sharks and rays ever undertaken, meanwhile, revealed that 37% of 1,200 species evaluated are now classified as directly threatened with extinction, falling into one of three categories: vulnerable, endangered or critically endangered.

That's a third more species at risk than only seven years ago, said Simon Fraser University Professor Nicholas Dulvy, lead author of a study underpinning the Red List assessment. “Overall risk of extinction is rising at an alarming rate,” he said.

“The conservation status of the group (sharks & rays) as a whole continues to deteriorate”

Bid to patent AI creations nixed

TECHNOLOGY

SAN FRANCISCO: A US judge has ruled that artificial intelligence cannot get a patent for its creations, ruling that such a privilege is reserved for people.

District court judge Leonie Brinkema backed a decision by the US patent office to turn away applications made on behalf of a “creativity machine” named DABUS.

Brinkema issued a ruling on Thursday saying that “the clear answer is ‘no’” to the question of whether an AI machine qualifies as an inventor under patent law.

“As technology evolves, there may come a time when AI reaches a level of sophistication that might satisfy accepted meanings of inventorship,” Brinkema said in the ruling.

“But that time has not yet arrived and, if it does, it will be up to Congress to decide how, if at all, it wants to expand the scope of patent law.”

Stephen Thaler had applied for patents on behalf of his DABUS machine in 2019, only to have US patent officials conclude the AI didn't qualify because it isn't an individual, according to court documents.

“The AI came up with the invention and not me, so it would be inaccurate to list myself as the inventor,” Thaler said in response to an AFP inquiry.

One of the purported inventions was for a light beacon that flashes to attract attention, and the other for a beverage container “based on fractal geometry.” Brinkema said in the ruling that the law lets “individuals” hold patents, and people — not machines — fall into that category.

Thaler's attorney, Ryan Abbott, who heads an Artificial Inventor Project, said they will appeal the ruling. “We believe that listing an AI as an inventor is consistent with both the language and purpose of the US Patent Act,” Abbott told AFP.

“This decision would prohibit protection for AI-generated inventions and it diverges from the recent findings of the Federal Court of Australia.”

In July, a judge in Australia sided with Thaler in a legal fight to get a patent for DABUS machine under the auspices of that country's Patent Act, according to a copy of the ruling posted online.

Less oak cover could threaten biodiversity

STUDY

DEHRADUN: Decreasing cover of oak forests and their replacement by chir pine in the Western Himalayan landscape could render a large number of flora and fauna vulnerable to local extinction, revealed a joint study.

The key reason for the replacement of oak forests was attributed to the presence of more pines in the surrounding landscape, lower levels of winter precipitation and Topographic Wetness Index (TWI), a measure which quantifies terrain-driven variation in soil moisture.

Citing ornithologist Ghazala Shahabuddin's work, the study stated that pine forests harbour only 54-67% of all bird species found in proximal dense oak forests.

The study titled ‘Expansion of pine into mid-elevation Himalayan oak forests: Patterns and drivers in a multiple-use landscape’, published in Forest Ecology and Management, was conducted jointly by the Center for Ecology Development and Research, IISc Bengaluru and the National Remote Sensing Centre.

The study revealed that Oak forests in Uttarakhand have reduced by 29% while pine forests increased up to 74% between years 1991 and 2017.

Ban on tree cutting could have led to the spread of pine stands, even as oak forests continued to be logged and grazed. The pine plantations in the lower elevation areas could have expanded laterally and upslope after 1990, added the study

Efforts mount to stamp out ivermectin drug craze in US

MEDICINE

WASHINGTON: US health experts and medical groups are pushing to stamp out the growing use of a decades-old parasite drug to treat Covid-19, warning that it can cause harmful side effects and that there's little evidence it helps.

With a fourth wave of infections, more Americans are turning to ivermectin, a cheap drug used to kill worms and other parasites in humans and animals. Federal health officials have seen a surge in prescriptions this summer, accompanied by worrying increases in reported overdoses. The drug was even given to inmates at a jail in northwest Arkansas for Covid-19, despite federal warnings against that use. On Wednesday, podcaster Joe Rogan, who has been dismissive of the Covid-19 vaccine, announced he had tested positive for the virus and was taking the medication.

and some doctors, amplified via social media to millions of Americans who remain resistant to getting vaccinated. It has also been widely used in other countries, including India and Brazil.

This week, the top US professional groups for doctors and pharmacists appealed for an “immediate end” to the drug's use outside of research.

“We are urging physicians, pharmacists, and other prescribers — trusted healthcare professionals in their communities — to warn patients against the use of ivermectin outside of FDA-approved indications and guidance,” said the American Medical Association and two pharmacist groups.

Large studies are now underway in the US and overseas to determine if the drug has any effect on preventing or blunting Covid-19.

The latest plea follows similar warnings from federal and state regulators who are tracking side effects and hospital admissions tied to the drug.

Louisiana and Washington issued alerts after an uptick in calls to poison control centres.

FACT OF THE MATTER

Making waves without noise

TECHNOLOGY

The global auto industry has raced ahead on an electric wave with more manufacturers joining the race seemingly every day. The boating industry has sputtered far behind, bogged down by low-horsepower engines and batteries that take up nearly half the boat. That's in the process of changing. Bolstered by new tech, the electric boats are now faster, have smaller batteries with longer ranges and are still zero emission. “Electric boats used to be good for just cruising around,” said Alex Mongeon, CEO of Montreal-based Vision Marine Technologies. “Now they have more power and last a long longer.” Vision Marine has helped lead the charge in more powerful electric boats. X Shore and Arc is another industry leader.
